B.F. Goodrich Traction Twins

Choose the type that's right for your winter driving needs

1 If winter driving gets you worried about skids on icy roads, frozen slush, packed snow or wet streets—you need B. F. Goodrich LIFE-SAVER Tubeless Tires. Their revolutionary tread has thousands of tiny grip-blocks that "walk" instead of slide, grip instead of slip. Tested on ice, BFG LIFE-SAVERS outstarted, outstopped and outpulled other tires. Tested on wet roads at 30 mph, they stopped a whole car-length sooner than regular tires. What's more, B. F. Goodrich LIFE-SAVERS repair their own punctures, protect against blow-outs resulting from bruises—yet cost less than any regular tire with blowout-protecting tube! LIFE-SAVERS are year-round tires—save you the nuisance of changing to winter tires. 6.70-15 size only $29.95 plus tax and your old tire.

2 Afraid of getting stranded in snowdrifts, bogged down in deep mud or stuck on steep, snowy hills this winter? You need B. F. Goodrich Winter Traction Tires. Impartial tests show BFG Winter Traction Tires outpull regular tires by as much as 25% in deep snow. You get 25% more pulling power in mud, too. The reason? It's the radical tread design. Deep, flexible cleats dig in like a tractor tire. The B. F. Goodrich Winter Traction Tire can make the difference between getting stuck and getting through this winter. Yet it runs surprisingly quiet—and the 6.00-16 size costs only $19.95 plus tax and your old tire.

YES, WHITE-WALLS TOO! You can get BFG WINTER TRACTION TIRES—as well as BFG LIFE-SAVERS—with gleaming whitewalls. No brand markings on the white portion, so they're easier to keep clean.

Find your BFG Retailer in the Yellow Pages under "Tires." Or send coupon for his name and address to Dept. P-37, The B. F. Goodrich Co., Tire and Equipment Division, Akron 18, Ohio.

7 AM: Pete Touart hurries off to his commuter train smartly dressed for a busy day and an evening in town in a suit made with Du Pont "Orlon".

9 AM: Crowded commuter train has failed to wilt Pete's suit. He arrives at the office looking as fresh and well pressed as he did when he left home.

3 PM: An important meeting calls for an extra-smart appearance. Even though it's a damp, humid day, suit made with "Orlon" still holds its shape.

10 PM: Staying in town for the theater, Pete wants to look his best. Suit made with "Orlon" has kept its press through all the activities of his busy day, keeps him looking smart all evening.

Pete Touart Stays Well Pressed and Well Dressed Around the Clock

Pete Touart, of Mount Kisco, New York, is a man with a commuting problem. Home to office takes him just under two hours, by car and train. And an evening in town after a busy day means his suit has to look its best from morning till midnight.

That's why he chooses a suit made with Du Pont "Orlon". He's found that it can work hard all day, yet not look the least bit tired or out of sorts when it goes out that night. And after a day at the office and a night out on the town, it can cat-nap on a hanger and be fresh-looking and ready to go again.

"Orlon" acrylic fiber makes this round-the-clock performance possible. "Orlon" helps all kinds of clothes hold their press and shape better. It gives them a rich, luxurious feel. And it makes them more economical, because they need less care. From every point of view, clothes of "Orlon" are a good buy. They're in demand, so for a wide choice, shop early.

"Orlon" is Du Pont's trade-mark for its acrylic fiber. Mrs. Touart's dresses are also made with "Orlon".

You'll find leading stores offering clothing made with "Orlon". Du Pont produces fibers only—not fabrics or garments. The skill of mills and manufacturers in using fibers properly is your assurance of quality and value.

MARIE AND THERESA MALLEN OF PHILADELPHIA BLOOM LIKE SPRING FLOWERS IN THEIR RINSO-WHITE CARRIAGE COVER.

When it's got to be really white—use Rinso with SOLIUM

When the Misses Mallen, aged 10 months, parade on Philadelphia's Rittenhouse Square, they take a certain lady-like pride in their appearance. Their mother caters to this pride by washing their carriage cover dazzling white in Rinso! To make your sheets and all your wash shine like the driven snow, you just can't beat Rinso. Here's why.

Whiter Than New

Rinso contains a wondrous ingredient called SOLIUM. Fabulous SOLIUM makes white fabrics look unbelievably white—even whiter than when they were new.

And housewives are astounded to see their sheets and pillowcases show the wonderful effects of SOLIUM even before their wash is fully dry.

And isn't it a blessing when you realize that you can safely wash almost anything in Rinso. Not only your cottons and linens, as you'd expect, but the new synthetic fabrics, too. Your woolens, of course, are safe in Rinso. When you wash blankets and sweaters in rich Rinso soap suds, the wool stays soft as new.

You Pay About 20% Less

Finally, and you know best how important this is,

Rinso costs you less—you usually pay about 20 percent less for Rinso soap than for most of the other washday products. Why? Because it now costs us less to make Rinso—and we pass this saving on to you.

Well, there we are. That's the story on today's Rinso. And remember that Rinso is guaranteed to get your white wash whiter than new, or your money back—guaranteed by Lever Brothers Co., New York 22, N. Y.

from Chrysler Corporation

SHE'S JUST WHAT THE DOCTOR ORDERED

America's 550,000 registered nurses and 60,000 licensed practical nurses contribute in a vital way to the continued success and well-being of our society. They are one of many groups that deserve a word of thanks for a job well done. And too, like all Americans, the nurse has found her car important to her for enjoyment and for work. Often, she chooses a Chrysler Corporation car, and we're happy for this expression of confidence in our product. In return, we're taking time off from the business of building and selling cars to offer in word and picture a well-earned tribute to all these people everywhere who are doing a good job for us—and for all Americans.

4. 70,000 OF HER stand ready to help us at home or, if we choose, at our hospital on special duty. Equally as skilled and efficient as her general duty sister, the private duty nurse provides constant around-the-clock care for those who need it. Day or night in any kind of weather, you can always count on her on-time arrival.

1. IN THE CLEAN crisp whiteness of her uniform, the nurse is the symbol of a skilled and time-honored profession. Wherever you find her at work, her cheerful smile and comforting hand are just what the doctor ordered. Here is a brief picture story of this woman in white and the work she does.

5. 30,000 CHOOSE to serve as public health nurses. Here her talents help fill a great area of human need. A visit to the bedfast mother of this far out family is welcome relief to troubled husband and children. There'll be hot meals for the youngsters, as well as competent care for Mom.

2. IN CLASSROOMS and wards of 1270 collegiate and hospital nursing schools, she trains for her profession. She will long cherish the hours of study and work, the activities, the thrilling climax of the capping ceremony by candlelight. She will spend 3 years of her life here, and often as much as $2000. 100,000 students are currently enrolled.

3. SHE AND 163,000 teammates staff our hospitals across the country. She is there to meet you when you arrive, and you feel glad that she is. During your entire stay, her helping hand is as near as the call-button at your bedside. And while she is caring for you, she is also keeping close watch on charts and records, and assisting your doctor.

6. THE ARMY, AIR FORCE AND NAVY NURSE has long been praised for her courage and devotion to duty. These 10,000 uniformed keepers of the lamp are a vital part of the armed forces medical departments, in war and in peace. Here, a Navy nurse checks on an ambulance pick-up at U. S. Naval Air Station, Grosse Ile, Michigan.

by EDGAR A. GUEST

*That cap the nurse on duty wears
Is costlier than the bonnets gay
Worn by the wives of millionaires
Regardless of the price they pay.
'Tis something she herself can make,
A bit of linen, trimmed and turned
The right to it (for mercy's sake)
Was with three years of training earned.*

*That uniform of spotless white
Was costlier than a lady's gown,
'Twas bought with care by day and night
For those with illness stricken down.
The royal robes show royal birth
But every nurse's simple pin
Is emblematic of her worth;
A symbol she has toiled to win.*

*Oh gracious spirit, love imbued,
That can such tender care accord,
Perhaps it is, that gratitude
Must always be your best reward.
Now out of gratitude appears
This tribute, done in simple verse
Unto the dedicated years
Of all who choose to be a nurse.*

Today's Best motor oil is Made...not Born

Because: Mother Nature produced oils good enough for yesterday, but not for the powerful high-speed engines of today.

Advanced Custom-Made Havoline is the result of taking nature's crude oil and removing impurities by superior refining methods. Then a Balanced-Additive formula makes Havoline's oil film tougher, prevents rust and the formation of corrosive acids and sludge.

This remarkable new Havoline is made, not born. Its Balanced-Additive formula gives your engine complete protection against all wear factors that oil alone cannot give.

Tests prove that this new motor oil actually wear-proofs your engine for the life of your car — keeps it clean, free from sludge, rust, and bearing-eating acids — keeps new-engine liveliness for thousands of extra miles.

Change to Advanced Custom-Made Havoline, the Extra Heavy Duty Motor Oil and keep new-engine power with its gasoline economy. Keep your driving pleasure for all the miles you keep your car. Get Havoline from your Texaco Dealer, the best friend your car has ever had.

"Born" Oil

This valve lifter has been in a test engine for only 100 hours. It was lubricated by a refined non-additive motor oil. The oil-film broke — note the "soup bowl" worn in the end. The valve lifters in your engine must take the beating of nearly a million hammer-blows every 60 minutes at 40 miles per hour.

Today's Advanced Havoline
wear-proofs your engine
for the life of your car

THE TEXAS COMPANY
TEXACO DEALERS
in all 48 states

Texaco Products are also distributed in Canada and in Latin America

IT'S NEW!

Advanced Custom-Made Havoline would have been built even without the need which brought it sooner. For there is a creed of The Texas Company, one of those by which we live: Make Havoline "THE BEST MOTOR OIL YOUR MONEY CAN BUY" ... and keep it best!

"Made" Motor Oil

This valve lifter took the same test but for 500 hours. It was lubricated with Advanced Custom-Made Havoline. Note the like-new condition, no wear. Keeping these valve lifters in your engine from wearing or sticking takes the best made motor oil. You can't get good performance from "slow poke" valves.

THE MAGIC CITY

Sirs:

The portfolio "Images of a Magic City" (LIFE, Sept. 14 and 21) by Ernst Haas makes me feel very proud of my profession. It is one of the few important happenings in contemporary photography! And appreciation to LIFE for presenting it.

DOT BEALE

Sirs:

Thanks—thanks—and THANKS to LIFE for completing the Dot Beale story ("Photo Letter from Home," LIFE, Sept. 21). Ever since her picture appeared in the April 13 issue, the unutterable sadness in her lonely face has haunted me, and when the names of repatriated prisoners began to come through the news, I found myself longing prayerfully to hear Lieut. Bill Beale's name.

Then your sequel just made me stand up and cheer.

CAMILLE PARKER

THE OATIS STORY

POINTS TO CHECK BEFORE BUYING CAR INSURANCE

How do you go about choosing an insurance company? Draw names from a hat? Not if you value peace of mind. Careful car owners dig deep for facts that cover all possible events. Savings are important to them. But they ask other questions, too. How strong is the company? Will its service follow me wherever I drive in the United States and Canada? If serious trouble strikes, can I call for help at any hour of the day or night and get help promptly? As one motorist said, "With insurance, like everything else, you get what you pay for. But I have to buy insurance before I need it. The company I choose may some day stand between me and financial ruin. That's why I check carefully."

COMPARE the facts about Liberty Mutual, given below, with what you are able to find out about any other insurance company. Then choose.

Financial Rating: AAAAA (Best's Reports). None higher.

Savings through dividends (currently 15% on car insurance in most states) returned to policyholders, regardless of accidents or claims.

Direct Sales Service by full-time company salesmen working from branch offices coast to coast.

Protection and Service in All 48 States (That's important if you're planning a trip.)

Protection and Service in Canada (Over 25,000,000 Americans visited Canada last year.)

Around-the-Clock Claims Service by full-time company claimsmen in the U. S., Canada or Hawaii.

Service Representative (licensed by the state) provides you with prompt insurance service or information at any time on any business day.

"One-Stop" Insurance Service if you wish, for home insurance as well as car insurance — under non-assessable policies.

Anxious Moment for any car owner comes right after an accident — when he realizes what a lot of trouble may lie ahead. But the Liberty Mutual policyholder gets peace of mind quickly by calling the nearest Liberty Mutual claimsmen. He can be reached at any hour of the day or night, from anywhere in the United States, Canada or Hawaii, and will be found in principal cities coast to coast.

Home Owners Have Saved 25% on Fire Insurance

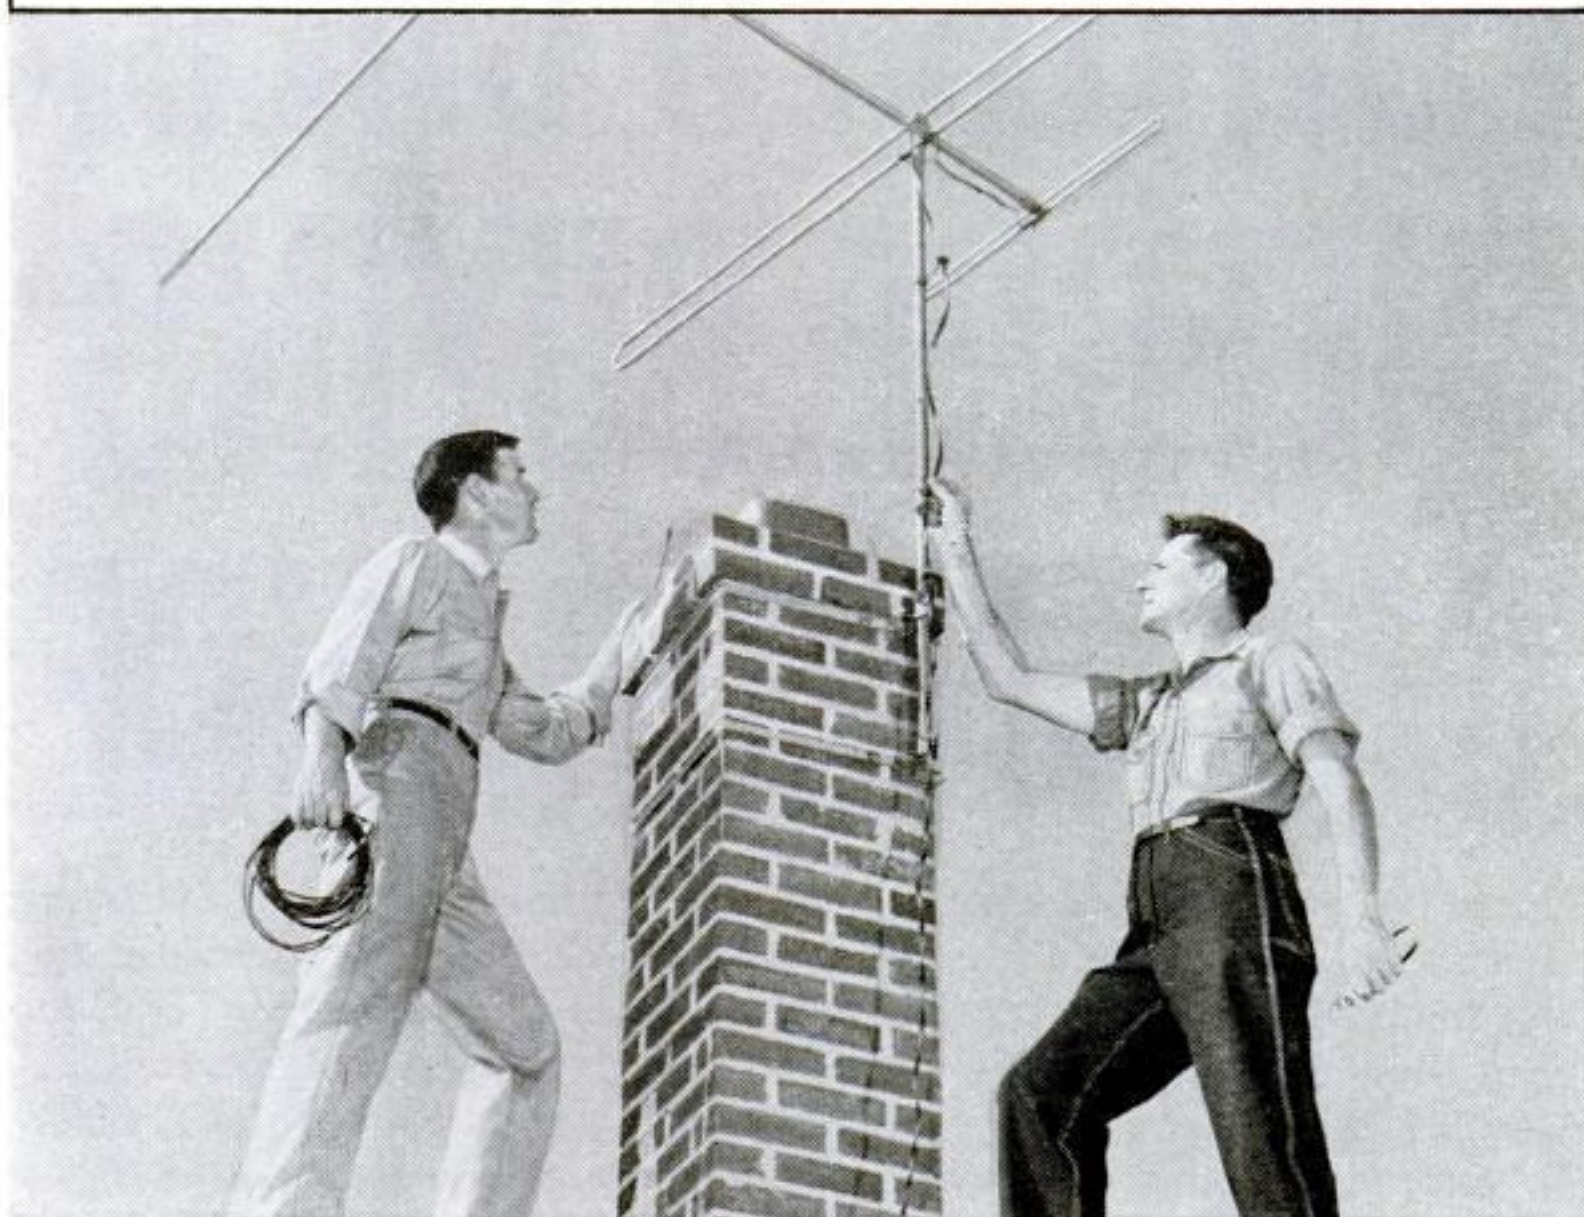

By insuring careful, responsible home owners, Liberty Mutual Fire Insurance Company has returned savings of 25 percent to policyholders for many years. Here you see another good example of Liberty Mutual's efficient operation.

General Dean for the Communists was pictured in your magazine ("Heroism of General Dean . . .," LIFE, Sept. 14)? I was American mayor of Seoul during U.S. military occupation of South Korea following World War II, and I knew An very well. We were both at the party shown in your magazine when General Dean tried a Korean pipe. I was sitting beside a photographer, but An is shown sitting at the head of the table, cigaret in hand.

After the Communist invasion of South Korea, An is reported to have joined their "Korean People's Republic" as No. 2 man, and when the Americans retook Seoul he disappeared to the north. He's never been heard from since.

FISH EATING (REPTILE)

Sirs:

In reference to your story on a trout-hunting snake ("A Snake Hooks a Trout," LIFE, Sept. 21), the picture below was taken on Sept. 2, 1953 on a remote lake in northern Ontario. The snake crawled out of the water about 20 feet away from where I was fishing. It had no objection to being photographed but showed no disposition to drop the fish.

FISH EATING (HUMAN)

Sirs:

Regarding your Letters to the Editors (LIFE, Sept. 21)—about Irving Clark who "back in the wacky past at Harvard started the intercollegiate fad of eating goldfish"—where is Mr. Clark now, in some sideshow or president of a corporation?

E. J. KELTY
Chicago, Ill.

● He is a successful lawyer in Seattle, Wash. While he has come to prefer his fish cooked, his old habits occasionally reassert themselves. At one recent dinner party Clark passed the time by reaching into a nearby fish bowl, gathering an occupant and dropping it into his gullet. The other guests were speechless.—ED.

Zone Control. With the system of temperature regulation known as Zone Control, separate areas of your home are designated as heating zones. Within these zones (floor plan gives a typical example) individual thermostats make it possible to maintain separate temperatures. Zone Control, the only system that enables you to adjust heating comfort to living habits, compensates for heating problems caused by picture windows, cold winds, sunshine. Zone Control can be part of the Electronic Moduflow system described below.

Now you can have the luxurious indoor comfort you've dreamed about - with Honeywell Climate Control

One of these Honeywell Temperature Control systems can make your home a better place to live—and help save fuel, too.

Electronic Moduflow. This remarkable new electronic temperature control system is eight times more sensitive than ordinary control. It works on the new scientific principle that for real comfort the temperature indoors must go up as the temperature outside goes down. Besides an indoor clock thermostat, the Electronic Moduflow system has an outdoor thermostat, like the one you see above. This outdoor thermostat senses weather changes and signals the indoor thermostat and electronic relay to call for more or less heat according to the weather. This means you have a great comfort improvement over old-fashioned single thermostat installations. Electronic Moduflow's average cost, installed, is $199.40. Terms are as low as $6.39 a month.

The comfort you've dreamed about . . .

That's one of the important promises of life in today's new houses. But to realize it in a home that has large glass areas and a rambling floor plan you've got to solve some new temperature control problems.

And to realize it in more traditional or existing homes you've got to solve some old temperature control problems in a better way.

That is why the heating industry has designed more efficient heat distribution systems—and Honeywell has developed new temperature control systems.

One of the Honeywell systems described on this page can give you improved wintertime comfort you've never known before.

If your heating plant is up to date, probably all you need to enjoy the benefits of Climate Control is the right Honeywell Temperature Control System.

CHROMOSOME DRAINING

Sirs:

Your photographs of human fertilization ("The Start of Life," LIFE, Sept. 21) contained not only striking visual presentation of what we have long known but a concept which is certainly revolutionary.

I thought that all previous scientific theory held that reduction division of chromosomes takes place in the formation of the sex cell, not after fertilization.

So please explain how the polar bodies can be draining off extra chromosomes in case my biology students should ask.

FRANK T. DAVENPORT

Williamsburg, Va.

● Modern research has shown that the egg nucleus contains 48 chromosomes until after the sperm enters the cytoplasm. After the sperm enters, but before the egg and sperm nuclei unite, a polar body draws off 24 of the egg's 48 chromosomes. Scientists differ in their use of the term "fertilization." In general, however, fertilization is considered to have occurred when the sperm breaks through the membrane covering of the egg, and conception is the uniting of the egg and sperm nuclei.—ED.

BEEKEEPER'S PROBLEM

Sirs:

Your "Brave Beekeeper" (LIFE, Sept. 21) reminded me of my father who, a few years ago, calmly scooped up with his bare hands a bee swarm that had settled in the hedge around our house. Hundreds of bees crawled about his arms until he dropped the huge ball of buzzing creatures into a wooden box which a neighbor farmer gladly took away. Raymond Presnell's bee beard cost him seven stings, but dad was able to dispose of an entire swarm without arousing the ire of a single insect.

STANLEY LEHRER

● Presnell was de-beed by his daughter who used a brush to flick the bees off by light downward strokes. As she brushed, Presnell stood close to the hive so that the bees landed in clusters near it. Then Presnell untied the queen bee from around his neck and deposited her in the hive. Neither he nor his daughter was stung during this entire operation.

This would probably not work with yellow jackets who are far more irritable and whose stings, while composed of the same venom as ordinary bee stings, are much stronger in concentration and therefore far more harmful.—ED.

LUTHER'S TREE

Sirs:

In your short article on "Luther's Tree" (LIFE, Sept. 21) you twice call Luther's teachings heresies. Most of them are so labeled only by the Roman Catholic Church.

THEODORE A. BUENGER

Wilmette, Ill.

● LIFE used the word "heresies" in the sense that his statements were in opposition to the official church beliefs of the 16th Century. They no longer are, of course, in the eyes of the world's non-Catholics.—ED.

Sirs:

FRENZIED BELTER

Sirs:

In your story, "Bryant the Belter" (LIFE, Sept. 21), mention is made that Joyce Bryant came from a Seventh-day Adventist family. She may have been a member of that religious group once but she most certainly is not now. Three things combine to prove the truth of this statement: 1) Adventists do not believe in torturing their bodies; 2) they do not believe in attending nightclubs; 3) they do not believe in watching or in taking part in performances such as Joyce Bryant engages in.

A BOSS TALKS BACK

Sirs:

In your editorial "Twilight of the Bosses" (LIFE, Aug. 31) you pay tribute to the late Edward J. Flynn, and take a gratuitous slap at me. [LIFE referred to "faded bosses such as . . . Pendergast . . . Hague . . . Crump"—ED.] Despite your sneer at me, I probably have been successful in more elections than any other man in America. I was elected 25 times myself as police commissioner, mayor, congressman, county treasurer, national committeeman, etc. and have assisted in 92 other elections during 51 years without a single defeat in Memphis and Shelby County. I fail to recall that Pendergast ever ran for any important office. . . . Hague, as far as I can remember, limited his official activities mainly to the offices of mayor and national committeeman, though his leadership perhaps covered a much longer period than Pendergast's.

I have never been charged with dishonesty. . . . Beautiful parks, clean streets have won Memphis awards for City Beautiful. We have no organized vice. We have low fire rates, the lowest tax rate of any U.S. city over 30,000 population. We own our light, gas and water plants which are highly profitable. I led the move to make that purchase.

The good people down here would never have supported me all these years if they had thought I was the type of man to play on Pendergast's team.

E. H. CRUMP

• Boss Ed Crump has never been charged with dishonesty. The charge against him was always strong-arm stuff, as in an election in 1928 when all Memphis newspapermen in sight were jailed for threatened breach of the peace.—ED.

Yes, we bet a $1,000 bill on the sticking-power and strength of Texcel Cellophane Tape—and we won!

We taped an envelope containing $1,000 to the fuselage of a big DC-6. The ship flew the 724 air miles from Chicago to New York, and through some bad weather at that. Yet the Texcel Tape didn't even pull up at the edges.

There's a good reason for Texcel's wonderful sticking-power. It simply has better "stickum"... made possible by a remarkable new ingredient called Neotril that makes Texcel Cellophane Tape stick smooth, tight and long.

skin! So use "Lysol" Brand Disinfectant whenever you clean without fear of rough red hands. Use "Lysol" with the knowledge that you are giving your family the very best disinfectant protection against disease germs.

Use It With Confidence

No better assurance of the effectiveness of "Lysol" is the knowledge that many hospitals from coast-to-coast use this famous disinfectant.

Widely Endorsed!

"Lysol" is perfect for cleaning, as well as for dozens of other uses. Add new "Lysol" to your laundry water for greater sanitation. Be sure to use new "Lysol" when you clean sinks, tubs, toilets, woodwork, doorknobs, closets, shelves, nursery, kitchen, bathroom, kitchen counters and disposal bins. Pine-oil Products Fail!

"Lysol" kills important disease germs that pine-oil products fail to kill. And new formula "Lysol" Brand Disinfectant gets into cracks, crevices and crannies—kills disease germs in hard-to-get-at places. So be sure to use "Lysol" when you clean woodwork and tiled floors.

Truly Economical

You will find that new, improved "Lysol" is truly economical because it is highly concentrated. A little goes a long way! Actually, you need only 2½ tablespoonfuls to a full gallon of cleaning water.

UP THE RAMP, carpeted and inlaid with narrow steps to give him proper footing, Dimah is escorted by his groom to the 40-foot diving platform where his co-performer, Marion Hackney, waits.

SPEAKING OF PICTURES

...A diving horse named Dimah shows form from 40-foot tower

Until Miss Lorena Carver came into his life a few months ago, Dimah was an ordinary Texas horse—a little runtier than most perhaps. Miss Carver decided to reactivate an act which her father had originated 75 years ago. Ignoring the fact that Dimah had no previous theatrical experience and could neither talk, spell nor do arithmetic, Miss Carver trained the horse to dive. Next she hired Marion Hackney, 19, to accompany Dimah on 40-foot leaps from the high tower at Atlantic City, N.J.'s Steel Pier into a 12-foot-deep tank below.

So far as Dimah is concerned, the jump appears to be entirely his own show. After ascending the ramp (top, left), he waits at the platform (top, right) until the time is right. Then, being neither pushed, pulled, kicked nor catapulted by artificial means, he takes the leap, with Miss Hackney clinging closely. So far, they have made it every time. For doing so well in his first season in show business, Dimah is going to get the winter off and will spend it in Bucks County, Pa., a popular retreat for successful show people.

READY TO GO, Dimah, with rider aboard, extends forefeet down the hanging apron (top), slides along it until, a few seconds later, he kicks off (lower picture).

IN MID-AIR, the horse sails gracefully toward the tank. Miss Hackney, wearing only crash helmet and swim suit, clings to narrow strap round Dimah's neck.

GETTING MEAL HARD WAY

WITH CARROT AS COME-ON, Miss Carver trains second horse, Del Oro, to dive. From a ramp only 14 feet high, Del Oro repeats Dimah's technique (two top pictures), hits the water in a flying spray and claims reward (bottom).

HIGH SPEEDS, HIGH SPIRITS, CAMERA TO MATCH

Our photographers are often asked just what it takes to produce good pictures. There are intangibles like creative genius, intuition and good luck, but there are also more down-to-earth requirements like quick reflexes and the proper equipment. Mark Kauffman, one of the seven staff photographers around the U.S. who covered the return of one-platoon football, had to move fast to shoot the action; he had to move even faster to throw himself clear of the bruising conclusion of an end run (above, right). Later, at the World Series, Kauffman used a special sequence camera with a cannonlike telephoto lens to get vivid close-ups of the Yankees and Dodgers at play (pp. 42, 43).

Sheer high spirits too are often an asset to producing good pictures. While he was photographing people who were getting tossed off a mechanical bucking horse in Texas, John Dominis was so carried away by the fun that he wasn't able to resist having a go at the bronco himself, with results that were photographed (p. 214) by Mrs. Dominis.

A more straight-faced requirement is the ability to work out a sensible plan for photographing a story. Before Ralph Morse could shoot night surf-fishing at Martha's Vineyard, he had to decide what equipment he would need on this difficult job. First he rented a jeep "beach buggy" to negotiate the soft sand. Then he borrowed a small yacht which would stand offshore and shine a light in toward the surf-casters. After that he collected one ton of stroboscopic equipment (generator, condensers, wiring) to provide power to illuminate a sizable section of the beach. Only then did Morse, described by a columnist on the scene as "an ageless young man of ample proportions . . . and the capacity to convey the impression he was jumping up and down when in fact he was standing still," take the exciting and unusual pictures which are included on pages 109 through 112. But the ageless young man wasn't through. Shortly thereafter he started six days' work on the dock strike, which is the lead news story in this week's issue.

AVOID THE HAZARDS AND FATIGUE OF LONG HIGHWAY TRIPS!

RIDE modern trains - RENT a car on arrival!

With Rail-Auto Travel it's no longer necessary to risk fatigue . . . break-downs . . . and bad weather conditions.

Millions of travelers . . . vacationists . . . business people prefer the Hertz Rail-Auto Travel Plan because it's the smart . . . easy . . . sensible way to travel! By rail you avoid all the tension and hazards of long, tiring highway miles. On arrival—rested and relaxed—you simply step into a new car from Hertz—reserved in advance—and drive it as your own. All gasoline, oil and proper insurance are included in the low rental rates. AND—five can ride for the price of one!

HERTZ SERVICE: what it is, what it costs, how to get it -

What It Is . . . Hertz is a rent-a-car service available in more than 500 cities and resort areas throughout the United States, Canada, Alaska, Hawaii, the Virgin Islands, Cuba, Haiti, Mexico, Great Britain, Ireland and Switzerland.

What It Costs . . . Here is a specific rate example: at the Hertz station in Cincinnati, Ohio, the 24 hour daily rate is $7.00, plus 7 cents per mile, including gasoline, oil and insurance. Thus, the total cost for a trip of 30 miles in any one day is only $9.10, whether one person or five ride in the car. Rates are lower by the week. Rates vary slightly in different sections of the country.

Gasoline, Oil, Insurance Furnished . . . Even on long trips, whatever amount you pay for additional gasoline and oil is refunded to you. Public Liability, Property Damage, Fire and Theft Insurance and $100.00 deductible collision protection are included in the low rate—at no extra cost.

How To Get It . . . It's as easy as A-B-C to rent from Hertz: (A) look in your telephone directory under "H" for your nearest Hertz station; (B) show your driver's license at the station and identify yourself; (C) step into a fine new car and go!

Advance Reservations . . . To be sure of a car when you need it, locally or in some other city, it is well to make a reservation in advance.

Any Hertz station will make a reservation for you, anywhere, for any time. Or, if you have the correct Hertz station name and address at your destination city, you can make your own reservation by letter, telegram or telephone. Also, any railroad reservation office will make a Hertz reservation for you through the Hertz Rail-Auto Plan at the time you purchase your train ticket. Always insist on Hertz when you make your reservation and be sure you get Hertz service when you arrive at your destination.

New Model Cars . . . Cars rented from Hertz are always current-model cars, of popular makes. The car you rent bears no Hertz identification—it is your private car, for an hour, a day, or as long as you wish.

Charge Cards Available . . . Hertz International Charge Cards are issued to well rated business firms and individuals. The card serves as identification, eliminates deposit requirements, and provides credit privileges if desired. These same privileges are accorded to Air Travel Card and Rail Credit Card holders.

Additional Information . . . For information on Hertz stations—anywhere—or for any details of Hertz Service operations, contact your nearest Hertz station or—write or phone Hertz Rent-A-Car System, Dept. 210, 218 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago 4, Ill.; phone: WEbster 9-5165.

PLANNING NEW UNION, Paul Hall (left), East coast head of the seafarers' union (20,000 members), talks with Dave Beck, boss of 1.3 million teamsters.

GOVERNMENT, A. F. OF L. MOVE IN ON THE DOCKS

All the North Atlantic coast ports were still last week as the racketeering riffraff which runs the International Longshoremen's Association called out 40,000 members on strike. The strike—over a small differential in pay between what the union demanded and what the shipping companies offered—was called reluctantly by the union which was beset by more dangerous enemies than the shippers. Arrayed against the I.L.A. were a rival union, the states of New York and New Jersey and the government of the U.S., all of which were displaying a belated but vigorous interest in cleaning up the mess on the waterfront.

The I.L.A. had been expelled from the A. F. of L. because it would not oust the hoodlums who ran it. A new A. F. of L.-sponsored union, also called the I.L.A., was pushing to take over the longshoremen. A commission established by New York and New Jersey was threatening to keep ex-convicts out of responsible jobs on the docks. Caught between these threats and the expiration of their contract with the shippers, the I.L.A.'s leaders called out their men. Nothing moved on the piers save military troopships and some passenger liners whose passengers had to carry their own luggage. On appeal from the shippers, who had been urged by Governor Dewey not to deal with the old union, President Eisenhower called on the Taft-Hartley law, which would require the strikers to go back to work for 80 days. In that uneasy "cooling-off" period the dock wallopers faced for the first time in their lives a chance to decide their own fate (next page).

NEW RULES AND A NEW UNION BRING

The average longshoreman is a decent citizen, making a fairly decent living ($2.27 an hour) in a world where life is always rough and sometimes unnaturally short. If he has let himself be pushed around and plundered by the racketeers, it is largely because he has been too scared of a bullet or a beating to do otherwise.

The new strike opened with all the rumblings of a bloody war between rival unions, but an unprecedented marshaling of police made the waterfront a safer place than it is even in times of labor peace. The dockers meanwhile were pondering the most important choices of their working life. The National

HOPE FOR A NEW DEAL ON THE DOCKS

Labor Relations Board can guarantee them a secret election if 30% of the members of the old union sign up with the new one. An indication that they would come after the Waterfront Commission—out to drive criminals from key jobs—distributed registrations which have to be filled out by every longshoreman who wants to work on the docks after Dec. 1. The old I.L.A. leaders, who would be hard-hit by the regulations against employing ex-convicts as hiring agents, told their men not to send in any registrations. But in three days, 7,000 men—almost a third of the New York dockworkers—had defied them and replied (right).

A MIRACLE OF SURVIVAL IN KENTUCKY BEANPATCH

The C-46 chartered by the Army to ferry 38 Puerto Rican GI's from Camp Kilmer, N.J. to Fort Knox, Ky. descended gently onto Louisville's Standiford Field. Only 200 feet over the runway it suddenly stalled and plunged into a nearby soybean patch. The startling picture above was taken five minutes later by a Kentucky state trooper. By some miracle 18 aboard survived. Their bodies were piled up among the dead. Anguished Spanish invocations—"María,

A SURPRISE HAPPY ENDING FOR ALICE WHO PLAYED HOOKY TO GET A RING

A big-bargain diamond sale at S. Klein in New York City fell just as Alice Witt, 18, and Frank De Chirico, 21, decided to get engaged. Alice reported in "sick" to Guaranty Trust Co., where she worked, and hied-ho with her fiancé for the store, where a newspaper photographer took a picture of the two (left) picking a ring. Next day a bank officer saw the picture

Screaming and weeping, this crippled Chinese U.N. prisoner is being carried back to Communist lines in Korea at his request. He refused repatriation, then, together with 64 other highly suspect "anti-Communists," he changed his mind. The vast majority of the prisoners rioted in protest whenever Red observers came near. Indian guards shot at them, killing three, and the Indian-led repatriation commission seemed less and less neutral to the U.N. command.

Her plight reached the ear of McGregor Sports Wear Co., which hired her (third picture) at $7 a week over her old job. Klein, enthralled at the free publicity, gave her a $105.95 wedding gown (right). It seemed to Alice all the world loves a lover—all, maybe, except banks.

UMPIRE'S VIEW OF THE SERIES

of the spilling, sprawling play

The Yankees and the Dodgers sprawled and spilled over the diamond as they fought in the World Series. The tight, tough play thrilled the country's fans but none of them—not even those in the ball park's best seats—got as good and close a look at it as the photographs on these pages provide.

To take them LIFE Photographer Mark Kauffman used a specially built sequence camera with a 400-mm. telephoto lens. After winding up his camera, Kauffman could give all his attention to picking and following a play, letting his camera grind away, taking pictures at the rate of five a second. Then out of each sequence he could pick his best shots. This way he got the odd juxtaposition of players after a flurry of action (above), the hurly-burly around home plate (opposite page). All in all he was able to show the game as it is seen by the cold-eyed umpires standing right on top of the play.

THE 14TH CHIEF JUSTICE

Appointment of Warren puts skillful manager in a post which needs one

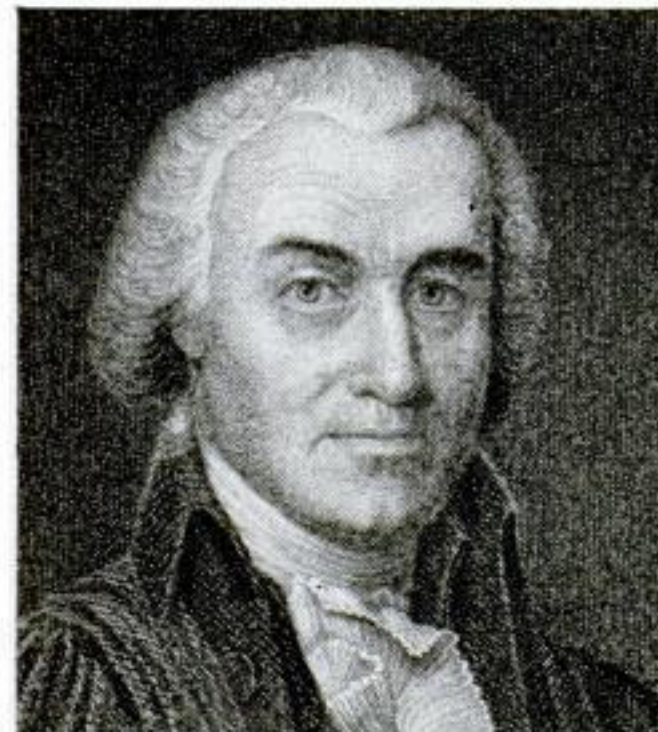

President Eisenhower's choice of Earl Warren, governor of California, to be Chief Justice of the U.S. was praised almost unanimously as an appointment which put into the post a man peculiarly fitted for it at this time. As head of a Supreme Court now widely divided both in caliber of its members and in their philosophies, the Chief Justice must allot cases judiciously and must try to keep different views from irreparably splitting the court. The liberally inclined Warren has proved astute as an administrator in keeping state machinery moving, and as governmental team leader in reconciling opposing views. In his important but overlooked post as head of the whole federal judiciary, Warren can give efficient management to the court system. Some few complaints were heard that Eisenhower should have chosen a man from the bench rather than from politics. But a look at the past Chief Justices (this page) shows that at least two men appointed from politics—Marshall and Taney—became two of the greatest Chief Justices.

JOHN RUTLEDGE 1795

This South Carolinian, a former Justice, was given recess appointment. But senators, doubting stability, rejected him. Afterward he went insane.

OLIVER ELLSWORTH 1796-1800

A former U.S. Senator from Connecticut, he was best known for his work in drafting the Judiciary Act (1789) which prescribed Court's procedure.

JOHN MARSHALL 1801-1835

Generally regarded as towering above them all, this Virginian established both the power of the federal government and of the Supreme Court.

ROGER BROOKE TANEY 1835-1864

A stickler for states' rights, he wrote Dred Scott decision giving aid to the slavery cause. Although a Southern sympathizer, he supported the Union.

SALMON P. CHASE 1864-1873

As Treasury Secretary he advocated the act which made Civil War paper currency legal tender. But as Chief Justice he held act unconstitutional.

MORRISON R. WAITE 1874-1888

The counsel who won the Alabama claims case for U.S. was one of hardest working Chiefs in history, wrote over 1,000 opinions in his 14 years.

MELVILLE W. FULLER 1888-1910

A traditionalist, he was criticized as defending wealth. He introduced continuing custom of having all Justices shake hands before each conference.

EDWARD D. WHITE 1910-1921

He was one of few to be elevated from Associate Justice to Chief. Though a former Confederate soldier, he declared anti-Negro statutes unlawful.

WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT 1921-1930

The ex-President served with distinction on court, made office for the first time head of whole federal judicial system, not just of the high court.

CHARLES EVANS HUGHES 1930-1941

The most distinguished modern Chief Justice, he gave Court great prestige. He resigned as Associate in 1916 to seek presidency, came back as Chief.

HARLAN FISKE STONE 1941-1946

A Coolidge appointment as Associate Justice, he was made Chief by Roosevelt. He wrote important decisions like one upholding Social Security.

FRED M. VINSON 1946-1953

The big Kentuckian, whose death on Sept. 8 created the vacancy, managed to keep the Court's feuds—notably Black vs. Jackson—from bursting out.

HUMBLE WARREN, at traffic safety conference, his last appearance in the assembly chambers of the

AN ARSONIST RUINS THE SLEEP OF MOSES LAKE

BUSINESSMAN ON GUARD, Steve Reeves, owner of a plumbing and heating company, watches at an isolated concrete mixing company with a .22-caliber rifle.

TOWN ON GUARD is reflected by lights on lake from area of homes that normally would be dark.

LEAKY COUPLING on hose showed haste with which lines were set up to fight third fire in building-materials company. Three nearby communities helped.

HAYSTACK FIRE at the Abbs's farm, just outside of town, was the fourth in series and the prelude for attempt to burn the farmhouse down two nights later.

Like a man locked in a blacked-out room with a maniac, the little town of Moses Lake, Wash. was tense and frightened last week. Armed men lurked everywhere in the night. Housewives slept with .45-caliber pistols under their pillows. One cop said that if anyone had so much as tried to light a cigaret after dark in Moses Lake, "he'd have been yelled at, shot at, stamped and spit on before he could have thrown the match to the ground."

Cause of the town's fear was an elusive arsonist who had lit the skies with five fires in five days and left every citizen wondering when his house or business was going up. The arsonist had made his presence dramatically known on a Saturday night by setting a huge fire in a lumberyard, then another in a produce warehouse. As firemen fought these, false alarms began coming in. It was almost a blessing when the power failed, plunging the town into brief darkness but also ending the false alarms. The first day's fires were followed by others thought to have been set by blazing wads of journal packing from railroad cars tossed into buildings.

Before the week was out, Moses Lake had strung up so many outdoor lights that most backyards were lit bright as day. Businessmen stayed downtown nights to guard their businesses while their wives stayed home to guard the houses. The arsonist, although he seemed to have suspended operations for the moment, was still free.

HELPING KOREANS HELP THEMSELVES

"The world has seldom seen such destruction," said Lieut. General John B. Coulter, U.N. Agent General for Korean Reconstruction. As a result of the war, Syngman Rhee's country suffered a million civilian deaths, has 5 million people on relief, 2 million refugees, 300,000 widows, 100,000 orphans, 15,000 amputees, all but immeasurable disease and hunger and homelessness. Yet it is also a country of great assets, intangible and tangible: the largest percentage of Christians of any Asian land, and one of the world's best tungsten deposits; a society solidly organized around the family, and seas full of fish; a people with a passion for schooling, and millions of empty GI beer cans which they press into roofing; many mines and industries to be rebuilt, and the sympathy of the American people, who know they must help restore Korea to health and hope because of what Korea stands for in the history of Asia and of liberty.

What can Americans do to express this sympathy? Our government has been helping in two ways. First, the Armed Forces have done $460 million worth of rear-area emergency work as part of their military duty to minimize "disease and unrest." Second, we contribute the lion's share to the U.N.'s Korean Reconstruction Agency (UNKRA), which spent $70 million last year and will spend $130 million this year on a variety of rebuilding programs, mostly having to do with industry, food and power. Before it is through, UNKRA may bring Korea $1 billion worth of aid.

But that is all government-to-government aid; essential, but somewhat over the heads of the Korean people and our own. Americans want to give something more heartfelt than taxes, and many have. Our soldiers, seeing the need with their own eyes, have left surprisingly large pieces of their pay in Korea. Almost every U.S. military unit adopted an orphanage, equipped a hospital, gave scholarships or the like; the I Corps gave $100,000 for amputee children; other GI contributions maintained the only place in Seoul that looks after homeless boys. The actual running of such good works is in the hands of some 30-odd voluntary agencies (Salvation Army, CARE, church missions, etc.). "It is hard to imagine how the Korean children could have survived during the last five years," says a recent report, "without the skillful and devoted work of church groups and the voluntary contributions of members of the U.S. and other U.N. armed forces."

To help all these private agencies and fill the gaps in their work, a new agency has now been formed on this side of the Pacific, under the chairmanship of General James A. Van Fleet. It is the American-Korean Foundation, and it is now raising money—$5 million for a starter. Instead of setting up a big relief organization of its own, A.K.F. aims to steer particular American donors to particular Korean projects. Through it, for example, the chairman of Monsanto Chemical, Edgar M. Queeny, gave the money for the first school of public health in Korea; A.K.F. itself gave 20 scholarships for the same school; Harvard's School of Public Health gave the textbooks and teaching materials; and the U.S. Army Medical Corps will contribute part-time teachers. As a result of two survey missions to Korea, A.K.F. has already given funds to 86 different projects, ranging from a system of tracing lost children to the Korean National Symphony Orchestra. One of its first gifts was to a 900-bed hospital near Pusan where amputees are retrained for useful work. It is especially interested in ways to help Koreans do things for themselves and hasten their deliverance from relief.

The American-Korean Foundation (345 East 46th Street, New York 17, N.Y.) is the logical way for most Americans to help Koreans. The response of individuals—notably through the movie theater drive organized by Spyros Skouras—has been generous so far. But here's another logical channel for American generosity: the American corporation. Not all executives realize how much unused power for good resides in the law that allows corporations to give 5% of their net income to charity, tax-free. As President Eisenhower said last week, corporations that act with conscience under this law "will properly and legally be assisting in the propagation of American faith."

The successful rehabilitation of Korea will be good for U.S. foreign policy, and therefore for American business. Here is one charity that any board of directors should see the sense in. Time Inc., which publishes LIFE, has made a substantial corporate gift to A.K.F. We urge corporate executives, as well as individuals, to get in touch with A.K.F. A hundred dollars will support one child in an orphanage for a year. A thousand will equip a 20-bed hospital ward. The list of things needed is almost endless—at the moment; but the promise of what Korea could become is almost endless too.

THE CURE FOR ANTI-AMERICANISM

In his article on Europe's anti-Americanism (pp. 192-204), Bruce Hutchison remarks that in Britain, at least, "the power of self-criticism is stronger than foreigners suppose." This is one of the most encouraging truths about Europe today. Britain's press even now includes not only some of the sourest critics of U.S. foreign policy but some of its best defenders. For instance The Spectator (London) recently attacked "fashionable anti-Americanism" as "utterly wrong and foolish," warned its fellow Britons against falling into "a helpless attitude of hoping for the best where Russian foreign policy is concerned," and reminded them that "all the postwar successes of the free world against Communist aggression—in the Berlin blockade, on the northern frontier of Greece and in Korea—have been scored by the very opposite of appeasement." To score these successes, said The Spectator, Western leaders had to assume—correctly—that the Russians did not want to fight. Then it added:

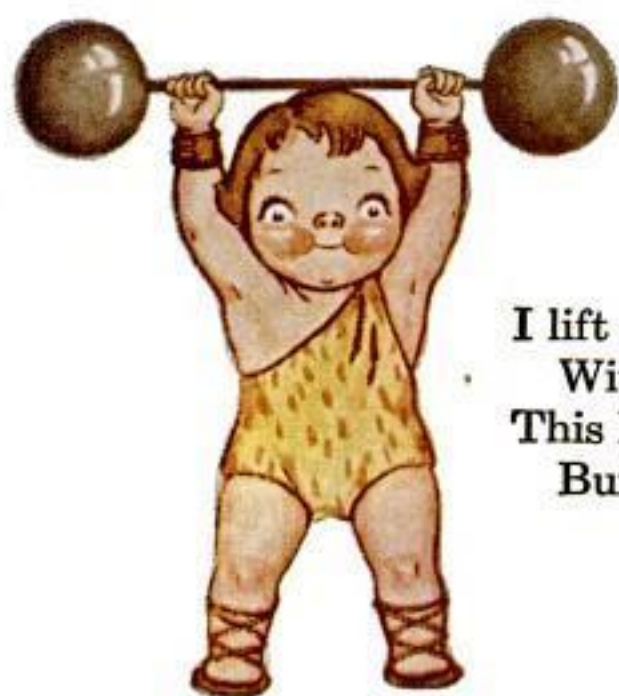

"But a second assumption is almost equally important. It is that if the West grows weaker the Russian tendency to aggression will increase. The assumption is clearly fundamental to American foreign policy. We ourselves pay lip service to it . . . [with] phrases to the effect that the strength of the West must be maintained. It happens that the phrases are true. It also happens that the Americans, for all their faults, really believe that they are true. And that in itself is a reason for being pro-American."

Mr. Hutchison gives us some good advice on how to improve our relations with the Europeans. But the best advice of all is implicit in the above quotations from The Spectator. It is: be right, and let the blast go through. If our policy toward Russia is right and reasonable, and we stick to it, it will always find right and reasonable friends abroad, even if a minority. And with their help it will outlast all kinds of wishful thinking, however fashionable.

Piccards rode. Two spotlights beneath hull illuminated water in front of its two heavy plastic ports.

DEEPEST DOWN

Two Piccards in a bathyscaphe descend two miles into the sea

Auguste Piccard, the Swiss professor who once set a record for ballooning in the stratosphere, last week set another for diving in the sea. Submerging with his son Jacques in their oddly shaped bathyscaphe he descended a depth of 10,330 feet—nearly 3,500 feet more than any previous plunge. The dive, made off Italy, took only two and a quarter hours to complete.

With his bathyscaphe Piccard followed the ballast-juggling principles of a free balloon. A spherical diving compartment was suspended beneath a 60-foot hull filled with gasoline for buoyancy. To sink the craft, ballast was added; to raise it, ballast was released. Descending into a sunless sea the Piccards saw a few luminous creatures, little else. Asked if he had been frightened Papa Piccard, a careful engineer, replied, "We trust in the eternal law of physics."

AFTER THE DIVE bathyscaphe breaks surface. Professor Piccard, now 69, began the descent with indigestion, perhaps from lobster dinner in his honor the night before. When he came up he felt fine.

TEARS FOR A COLD-WAR HERO

"Nothing is going to be conquered here," Mayor Ernst Reuter told the people of West Berlin, and thanks to him nothing was. The beret-capped mayor stumped his rubbled city on a gimpy leg (he was wounded in World War I), inspiring Berliners to defy the Russians—and his courage rubbed off on the whole free world. Thirty years ago Reuter changed from a promising, Russian-trained Communist (Lenin spoke of his "clear and brilliant mind") into an anti-Communist Socialist. He fled the Nazis in 1935, returned to Berlin in 1946. A year later he was elected mayor despite Russian opposition (Lenin also called him "a little bit too independent"). Nobody knew better than he the grim meaning of the cold war: the drone of the airlift when Berlin was besieged in 1948-49, the pilgrim shuffle of refugees, the crack of rifles at the workers' uprisings this year.

Last week Reuter, 64, had a heart attack. His wife and two sons heard him say, "I still have so much to do." A few minutes later he died, and Berliners lit torches and candles in his memory. Many of them wept in the streets.

TWO PORTRAITS recall two Reuters. As a youthful idealist, he was an army private in 1915, drafted despite his militant pacifism. Mature statesman in 1953 (right), he made a visit to the U.S. to get help for his people.

Among somber throng of 100,000 mourners, these women have come to steps of the Rathaus (city hall) to pay last respects to the mayor, lying there in state.

In his "Book of Food and Drink" Trader Vic says, "Of all the liquors the world over, rum is really my meat--nectar of the gods, the drink of the ancients." Here's the recipe for his most popular drink, the Rum Mint Squash: In a roly poly Old Fashioned glass mix 1 dash Peychaud bitters, 1 dash rock candy syrup, 1 oz. water. Add 1 oz. Puerto Rican Rum and chipped ice. Stir. Add twist of lemon peel and 6 or 7 crushed fresh mint leaves.

Mr. Newell insists that "Deviled Crabs San Francisco" are worth the effort: To 2 egg yolks, beaten, add ¾ cups hot medium white sauce, stirring constantly. Add 2 cups crabmeat and heat through. Add 1 tsp. prepared mustard, ½ tsp. lemon juice, 3 tbs. Puerto Rican Rum, dash cayenne, ¼ cup cooked mushrooms (optional). Transfer to oiled shells or ramekins. Sprinkle lightly with fine buttered crumbs and parsley. Brown in hot oven (450°) 5 min. Sprinkle lemon juice on top. Serve hot. (6 servings)

MRS. THEO CRONER OF NEW YORK DOES A LOT OF HOUSEWORK BUT MANAGES TO BE PRETTY AS A PICTURE.

"I wash 1400 pounds of laundry a year... but I'm proud of my pretty hands!"

If you ever meet Theo Croner, be sure to shake hands. You'll notice that hers are as soft and pretty as a pair of hands can be.

Yet Mrs. Croner (just like yourself) washes almost a ton of laundry every year. And plenty of it the hard way — by hand!

She's grateful for detergents, of course. Those miracle suds really chase grease and dirt. But detergents are a problem, too. That same grease-cutting action could send the natural oils and youthful softness of her hands down the drain, too.

Throw out detergents? Not Theo! She's found a way to keep her hands lovely despite all harsh cleansers. It's a simple trick, and we'll teach it to you. After every chore, smooth pure, white Jergens Lotion on, right away.

You won't see any sticky film. Being a liquid, Jergens Lotion doesn't just "coat" the hands. It penetrates — helps replace softening moisture. (It has two ingredients doctors use for softening.) More women use Jergens Lotion than any other hand care in the world.

Theo Croner will tell you that Jergens Lotion is the reason her hands are so attractive. Her husband may not know the reason, but he appreciates it!

So keep detergents in your house (there's nothing like them). Just keep Jergens Lotion in kitchen and bath, and use it after every chore. It's such an easy habit, and so important to a woman.

Egyptians sentence an ex-premier; June Haver leaves her convent; U.S. signs up with Franco

In Cairo an Egyptian military tribunal sentenced former Premier Ibrahim Abdel Hady to hang as a murderer and a traitor to his country. Hady, who had pleaded not guilty, was Farouk's prime minister during 1948, when the green Egyptian army was sent off to wage a losing war against Israel. During his premiership thousands of Moslem extremists were rounded up, and their leader was murdered, for which Hady was accused of being partly responsible. Only last month, according to his prosecutors, Hady was involved in an unsuccessful plot designed to overturn the current government of Egypt. After finishing with Hady's trial the tribunal turned to other prisoners just rounded up and also charged with treason. Among them are former Premier Mustapha El Nahas, his once-powerful wife, four members of royal cabinets, Farouk's press adviser and one of Farouk's cousins.

After the amputation the ship went on her way to deliver a load of clay to Chicago. Outside San Pedro Harbor the tanker Ticonderoga was heading for port when a blast tore a chunk out of her middle, leaving a tunnel (below) big enough to steer a launch through, but she held together and steamed on in to dock the next day.*

NEWSFRONTS CONTINUED

Nine days after jailing a Roman Catholic bishop and four priests as "U.S. spies," Polish Reds aimed higher. Stefan Cardinal Wyszynski, Primate of Poland, was ordered by Warsaw to give up all his duties, retire to a monastery.

Film star leaves convent

June Haver, who abruptly quit a $3,500-per-week movie career last February to don the habit of a novice in the convent of the Sisters of Charity in Xavier, Kan., turned up in Los Angeles (right). Her reason for leaving the convent, where she had been spending 16 hours a day praying and working in the kitchen and laundry: poor health, apparently the result of low metabolism. Will she try to re-enter the convent? "Well, I'm here now," said Miss Haver, "and I guess that speaks for itself." Her mother was more direct. "I think Junie realized almost from the start she had made a mistake," she said. "All her life she has been devoted to her family—a real home girl. You can understand this made it difficult to readjust to a religious life."

JUNE LANDS AT HOME

Police in White Plains, N.Y. ended a crime wave in which some 20 businesses were rifled by skillful thieves. Chasing a suspect across roof tops, they captured him only to discover he was a 9-year-old boy. At the station house he admitted being leader of a four-boy burglar gang that had pulled all the jobs. Then he dispelled any remaining police doubts by toying with the combination of the "foolproof" station house safe and, after a few sensitive twists, swinging it open.

How labor czar held court in Sing Sing

A published list of visitors to Sing Sing brought trouble to Arthur Wicks, New York's acting lieutenant governor, and to Joey Fay, a labor leader who was locked up in 1948 for shaking down building contractors. Wicks had paid five visits to Fay, who never had a chance to feel neglected in jail. Besides Wicks he entertained 87 other visitors, among them Jersey City Mayor John Kenny and former New York State Supreme Court Justice William Bleakley. Fay had sponsors as well as visitors. A letter-writing campaign to get him a pardon got help from Paul Troast, Republican candidate for governor of New Jersey.

At news of Wicks's visits, Governor Dewey demanded an explanation. Wicks said he had to see Fay on labor problems in his district. Then he added a shocking but true fact. Though the extortionist has been behind Sing Sing bars for five years, said Wicks, "He is still a power in labor circles." To cut Fay's power, Dewey shipped him off to lonely Dannemora, New York's toughest prison.

James Dunn, Ambassador to Spain, signed an agreement to build air and naval bases which will be on Spanish soil and under Spanish command but open for 10 years to American forces. The U.S. also promised economic aid. But Dunn carefully avoided any mutual defense treaty and did not offer Spain a chance to join the alliance of NATO.

CUBAN TRIES TO SELL JOE CUBAN HONEYMOON

McCarthy's 'stormy' courtship ends in a huge church wedding

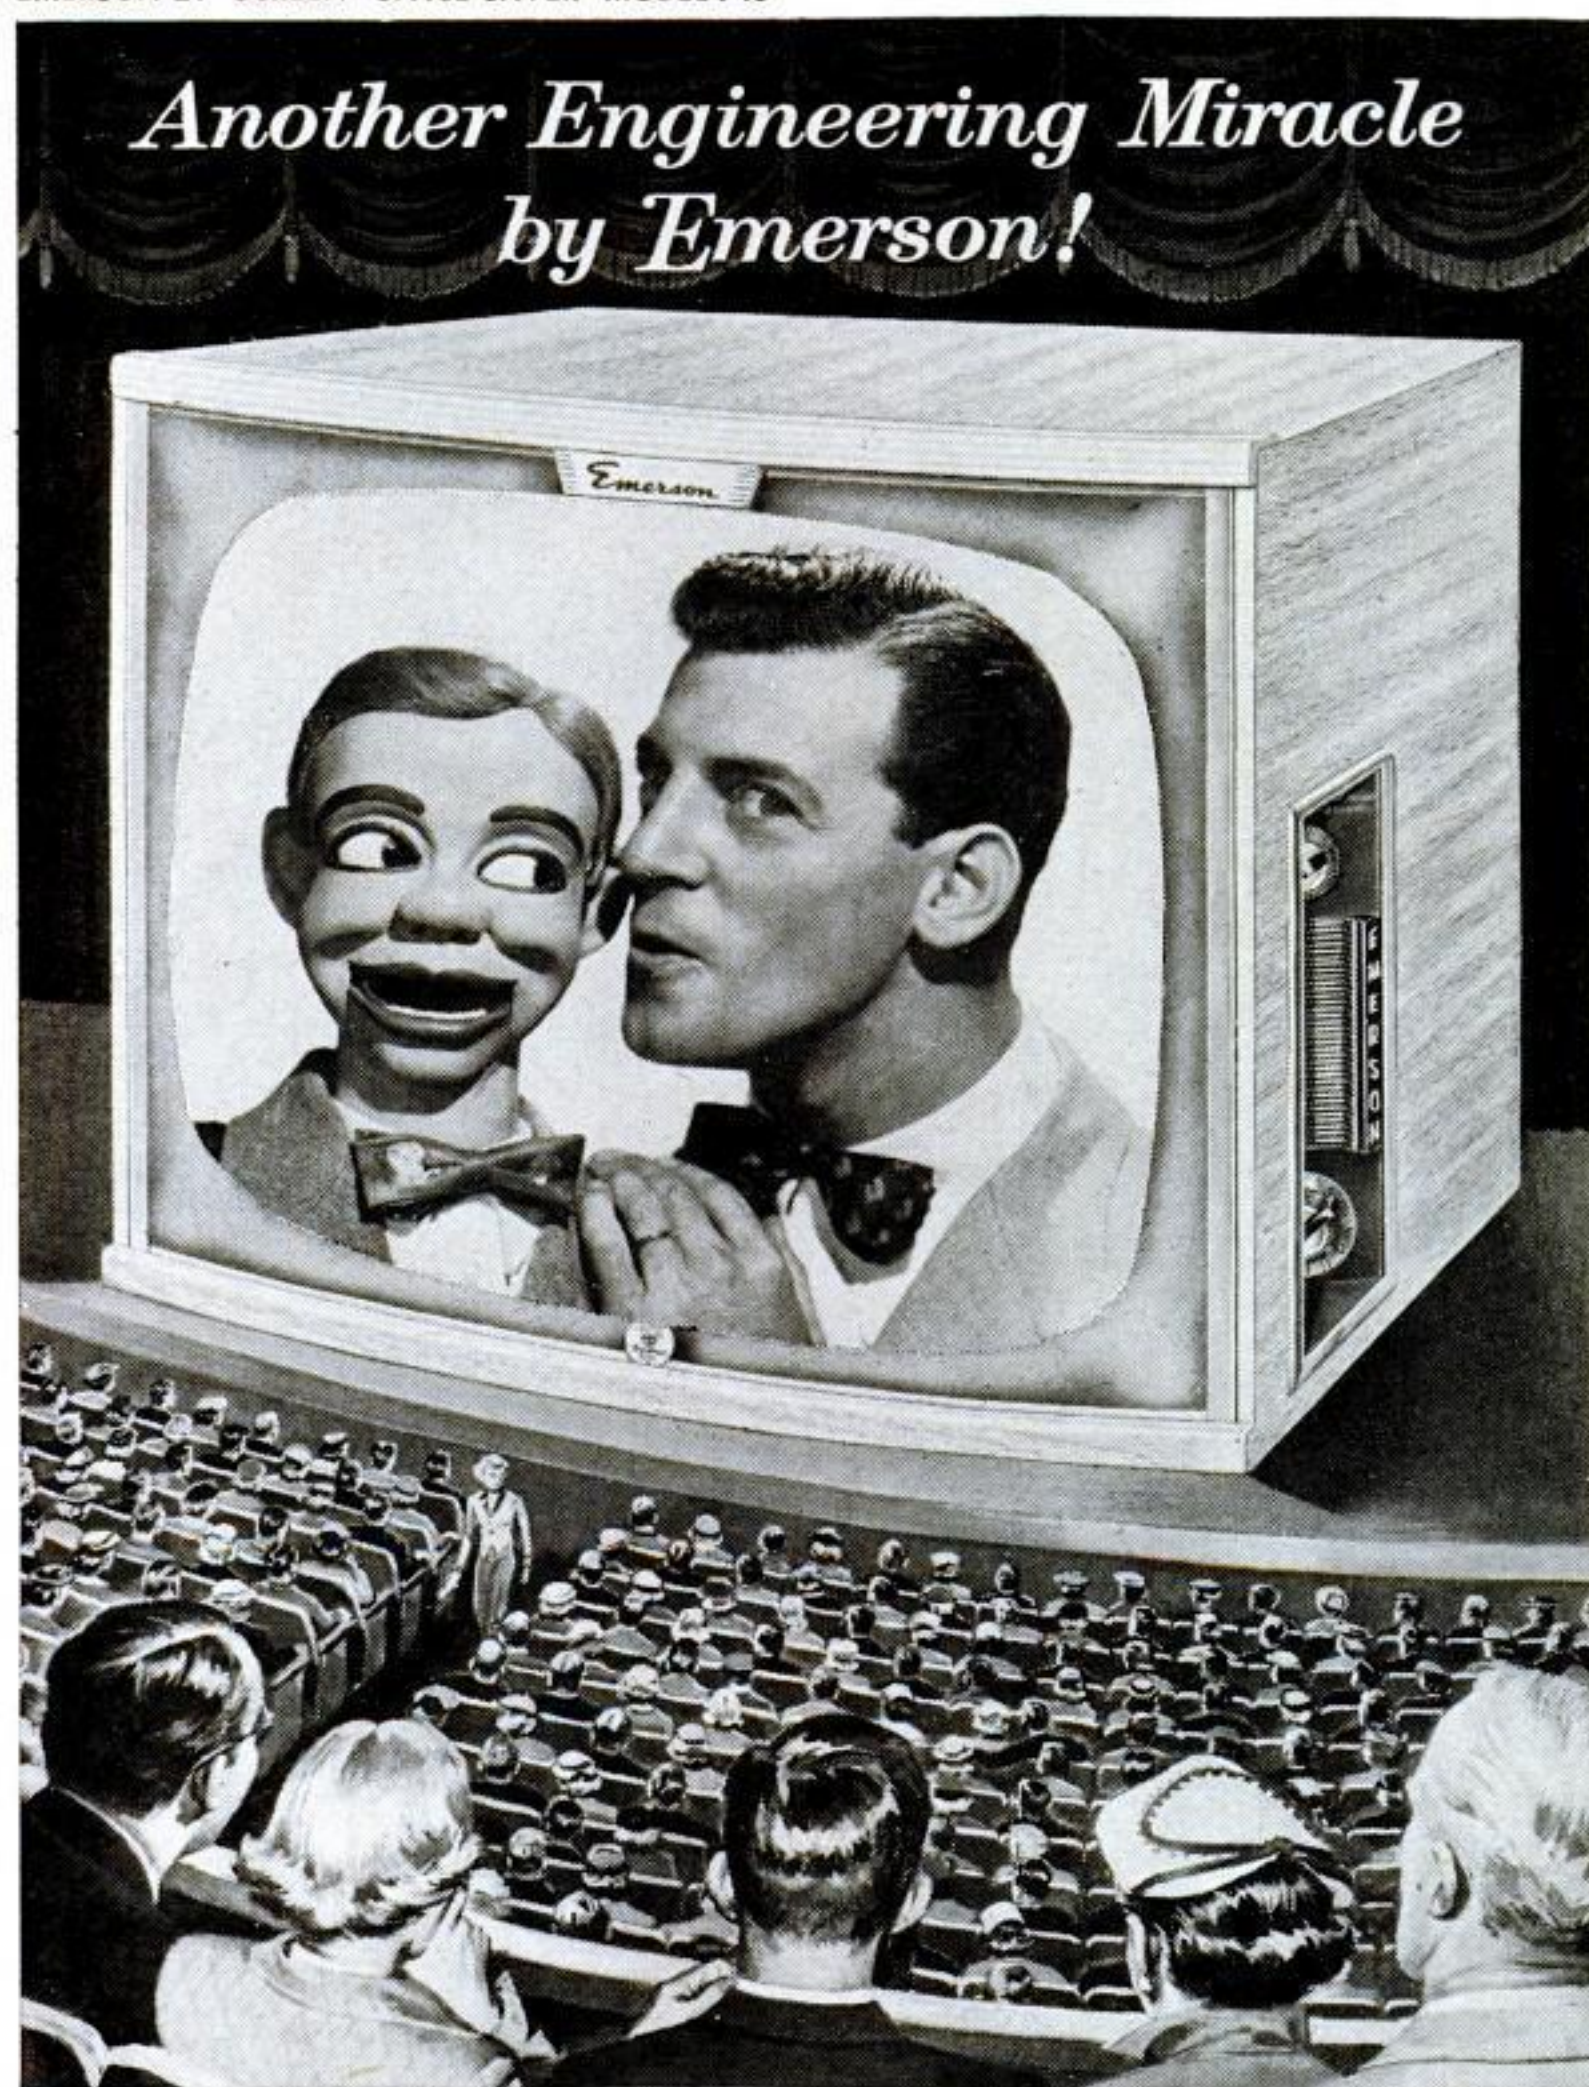

After what friends have described as a stormy courtship, Senator Joe McCarthy last week married his former research assistant, Jean Kerr, 29, a girl known around Washington for both her beauty and her own political acumen (one politician remarked he never talked politics with McCarthy without winding up by asking the senator to "see what Jeannie thinks about this"). A thousand persons, including Washington's top politicians headed by Vice President Nixon, witnessed the wedding in St. Matthew's Cathedral. There, as the couple knelt at the altar, cameras whirled until finally a priest had to shoo the photographers back.

After receiving a special "paternal apostolic blessing" from the Pope, the newlyweds walked outside into a crowd of 2,500 persons. Spectators shouted, "Kiss her, Joe!" Joe declined, helped his bride into a limousine and drove off for a reception at the swank Washington Club. The crowd's request was answered somewhere en route from the church to the club, for as the couple left the car Mrs. McCarthy wiped from her husband's lips a mark of red lipstick.

REVISITING KRAAL, Mavis, dressed up with doll, feels estranged from "family" and old playmate.

Is This Girl Part Zulu?

Dr. Johan Hendrik Botha, who runs a clinic in Natal, does not like Zulus. They smear themselves with clay and animal fat and wear goats' bladders as hair decoration. When he found a little girl with white skin, blond hair and green eyes playing on the cowdung floor of a hut in a remote kraal, an African village, he was shocked. He took her home to his wife.

There the girl, whose name was Mavis, was scrubbed and dressed. Shoes were found to fit feet grown large running barefoot. Although Mavis could speak only Zulu she was allowed to do things forbidden nonwhite children by the rigid race laws of South Africa: sit next to whites at soda fountains and play with white children on swings in public parks. Taken back to visit the kraal after two weeks with the Bothas, she showed plainly that she preferred the comforts of white Africa.

Under relentless questioning, Mavis' frightened black "grandmother" told various stories, first that Mavis had been left in the kraal by a white woman, then that Mavis was the child of her daughter, Ida, and a white soldier. No one could be sure which story was true but, basing their decision partly on the grounds that 6-year-old Mavis "habitually associated" with nonwhites, government officials said that they would ask the Childrens Court to declare the child colored. Meanwhile Mavis, all unaware, played happily in the home of Zulu-speaking white friends of the Bothas and started learning English and Afrikaans.

BLOND MAVIS is "biologically white" according to Dr. Botha. With this straight, silky hair, he argues that she could not possibly be Negro. He thinks she was abandoned by white mother.

WITH FIRST PICTURE BOOK, Mavis, unable to interest 2-year-old George Botha, turns to Negro boy who understands her chattering Zulu.

BUYING HER NEW SHOES, Mavis tries one on for size. Other shoppers in the race-conscious town patted her head and showed themselves friendly.

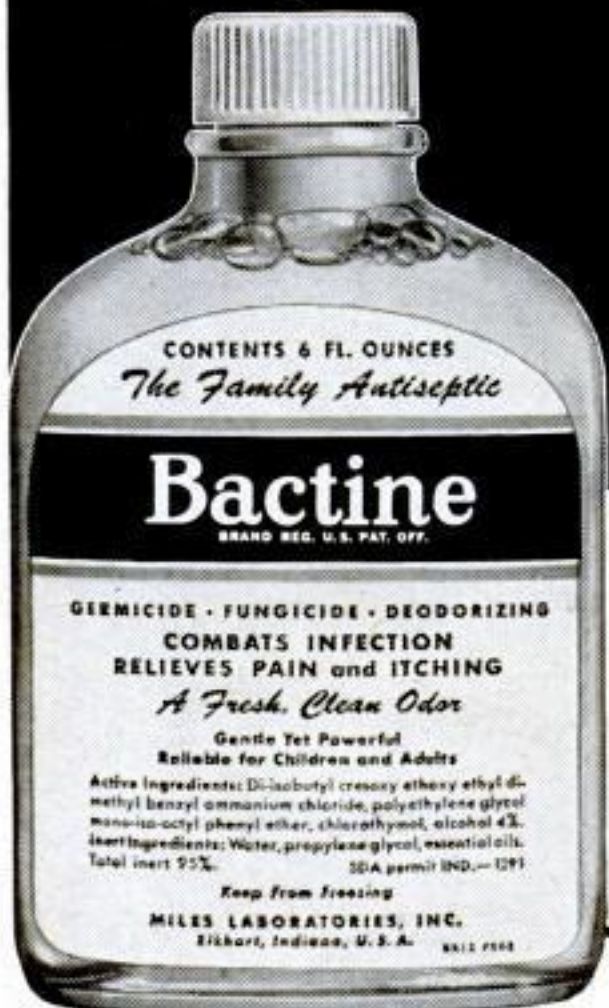

AT FAMILY BREAKFAST, using strange knives, forks and spoons, Mavis eats unperturbed, while George, jealous over newcomer, bursts into tears.

HERD OF DELICATE DESTROYERS

The holocaust above may be the costliest fire caused by animals since Mrs. O'Leary's cow. It is the climactic scene of Paramount's forthcoming movie, Elephant Walk, and takes place on a Ceylon plantation whose owner built his manor across the path elephants used from jungle to river. In this episode, a herd of elephants, asserting ancient rights, march through the house breaking furniture, upsetting kerosene lamps, causing general consternation. The actual shooting of the scene in Hollywood brought consternation to the studio. Trying to escape the flames and upset by falling plaster, the 11 elephants made for the side lines, scattering assistant directors like singed flies. True to their training, they did their best not to break anything. Finally, driven to it, the delicate beasts did a thorough job of demolishing the $100,000 set.

HOW FAT IS MY BROTHER?

An exhibit shows how new diet accelerates the growth of pigs

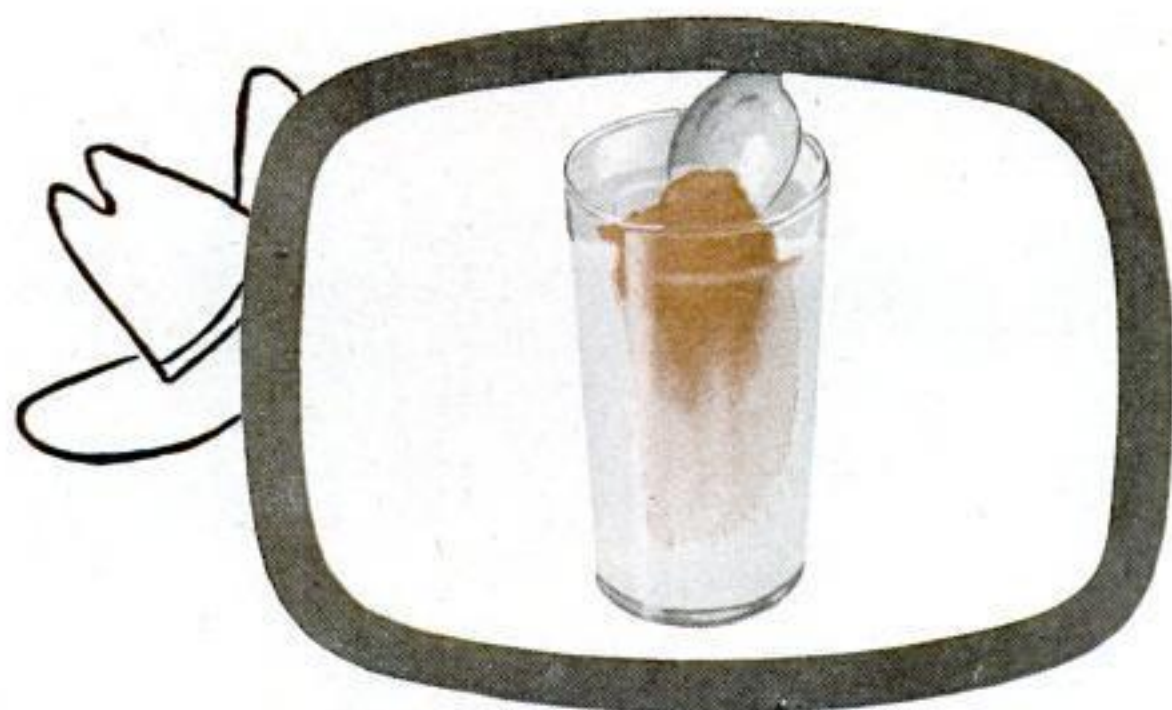

Spectacular modern improvements in swine fattening have proved immensely profitable to those farmers who have kept up with the latest methods. Last week, for the benefit of the farmers who have not kept up, the University of Minnesota's School of Agriculture put on a visual demonstration at St. Paul.

They showed off pigs born of the same litter, weaned at the same time, and then fed upon separate diets. One was fed on a 1910 diet made up almost entirely of corn. The other was fed with the new "Minnesota Supplement," a scientific formula in which cereals are augmented by vitamins and antibiotics. Starting last May from approximately the same weight after being weaned, the pig fed on the supplement had grown twice the size of its brother. The big pig will reach marketable weight six months ahead of the other. But what most interested economy-minded farmers was that the big one had eaten only half as much as his brother.

HOW THE 'COLUMBINE' FLIES

In a word, safely, thanks to a President's pilot who makes even Mamie like flying

by EDWIN DARBY

ONE day recently Lieut. Colonel William G. Draper, Air Force aide to the President and pilot of his personal plane, picked up his office telephone and found Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower on the line. "What about that airliner crash yesterday?" she asked.

If the First Lady's call had come a few months earlier it would have worried Draper. When he first met the Eisenhowers, back in December 1950, Mamie was afraid of planes. She was worried when she was flying with her husband, worried even more when he was flying without her. But now Draper knew she was just needling him.

Mamie has gotten over her fears for the President's safety, but many people have not. A large segment of the population believes that the nation's First Citizen should not risk unnecessary flying—for instance, from Washington to New York—when trains are fast and comfortable. They should be reassured to know that the President is almost as safe in flight as he is in the White House.

The presidential plane, a Lockheed Constellation called the Columbine, is crowded with all the conventional air safety devices, plus a few innovations introduced by her crew. Perhaps the most important safety factor is the pilot, Bill Draper, a medium tall, handsome, sandy-haired young man with intense blue eyes and the fervent manner, when on duty, of a missionary among a host of infidels. He lives by the conviction that travel by air can be made safer than by road, and his single-minded preoccupation with the President's safety has been communicated to his crew, almost with the force of an obsession.

Draper leaves nothing to chance. Unwilling to trust to memory or makeshift operational check lists, he has designed a special safety gadget. It is a glass-enclosed box containing a scroll on which are printed the check lists for all normal and emergency operations. By turning control knobs on the box, Draper and his co-pilot, Major William W. Thomas, can check off each item on the list. This little device eliminates the danger of pilot error through memory failure.

The Columbine is of course equipped with Loran, the Air Force's long-range navigational system, and the latest and best radar equipment, operated as is customary by the navigator. But Pilot Draper has a radarscope of his own right at his knee. Thus he too can keep constant check on any approaching planes or obstacles within a range of 200 miles of his plane.

Draper also makes constant use of the radar system to spot bad weather. His scope will detect oncoming thunderstorms and even mild turbulences. Draper often will detour as much as a couple of hundred miles to avoid rough flying weather and give the President a more restful ride.

Whenever the President takes off, Draper files a flight plan with civilian as well as military ground-control units and keeps in constant touch with them. Technicians at air installations along his route are practically looking over Draper's shoulder at all times. They supply him with the latest and most concise weather information en route, including special bulletins that advise him of every slightest possibility of weather trouble.

Precise scheduling, to the point of finickiness about seconds, is another precaution taken by Draper. The Columbine is off the ground exactly seven minutes after the door closes. And the door is opened exactly seven minutes after the wheels touch ground. On landings, an engineer stands behind Draper with a stop watch and counts aloud like a technician timing a radio broadcast to tell Draper whether to speed or slow the taxiing plane: "Three minutes, two minutes, one minute. . . ."

If the President is scheduled to land some place at 12 noon the Columbine's engines will stop turning and the door will open at 12 noon as precisely and inevitably as the beep of the national time signal. Such precision helps protect the President's life by making it possible for the authorities to clear all air traffic ahead of and behind the Columbine on both landings and take-offs.

You can't keep a good plane down

DRAPER figures the plane will develop mechanical troubles if it sits in the hangar just as the family automobile turns up with a dead battery when it sits in the garage for a week or two. So he tries to fly the plane two or three times a week for an average of an hour a day. The flights are anything but joy rides. Draper and the crew work through the book of normal and emergency procedures, simulating dead engines, shooting landings, trying instrument work. These flights keep crew and plane at the peak of efficiency.

The crew goes through emergency bail-out procedure like a crack close-order drill team. The lives of Draper and his men are not a factor in this routine. It is aimed at getting one man, the President, strapped into a parachute and out of the plane in a matter of seconds. The Columbine carries 30 chutes, on the basis of six chutes for every five passengers. The extras are another of Draper's ideas: some nervous passenger might pop a chute inside the cabin as he climbs into it. All chutes have quick-adjusting straps, so that any one of them can be strapped on the President.

There are stories that Eisenhower is reluctant to use his safety belt, which would make him a weak safety factor, but Colonel Draper says this is not so. He wants everyone to know that the President obeys all flight instructions meticulously, keeps the

Did Rheumatic Fever write a tragic ending to this picture story?

This little girl, as you can see, has been "a picture of health" from one to six.

But like many children of her age, she began to complain of a sore throat now and then, occasional feverish spells, and pain and swelling in the muscles and joints.

Her mother, sensible woman that she is, knew that such symptoms should be heeded promptly. The doctor found that this little girl had rheumatic fever, childhood's greatest disease enemy, whose great danger lies in the damage it can do the heart.

So, complete rest in bed under careful observation

was ordered until all the symptoms of the disease disappeared. This not only lessened the possibility of damage to the heart, but also helped build the child's resistance against recurring attacks of rheumatic fever.

Fortunately, this child's convalescence was rapid . . . and largely because a wise mother was alert to the tell-tale symptoms of rheumatic fever and sought prompt treatment.

Because her parents are careful to protect her from throat and respiratory infections (which usually precede attacks of rheumatic fever), she is leading a normal, happy life. As an added safeguard, the doctor examines her at regular intervals, even though she has recovered with no signs of heart damage.

* * *

Medical science is making steady gains against rheumatic fever owing to the research studies sponsored by the American Council on Rheumatic Fever and Congenital Heart Disease of the American Heart Association, the National Heart Institute, and many other public and private agencies. Today, in an increasing number of cases, rheumatic fever is being beaten—because it is being recognized and treated in time.

PARKE, DAVIS & CO.

Research and Manufacturing Laboratories, Detroit 32, Michigan

As a maker of medicines prescribed by physicians and dispensed by pharmacists, Parke, Davis & Company is intensively studying suspected causes of rheumatic fever—principally germs of the streptococcal variety—as well as drugs that may be used to combat them. New methods of approach for treating cases in which the heart has been damaged by rheumatic fever are also under investigation in the Parke-Davis Research Laboratories.

belt tight during take-offs and landings and whenever else Draper thinks conditions warrant its use.

When the President contemplates a trip to some out-of-the-way place, Draper takes the plane out a week or so ahead and makes the full run as a simulated presidential flight. He buzzes the airport so that all runways, approaches and obstructions are fixed solidly in his mind. Then he makes a dozen or so landings and take-offs to be certain nothing tricky is involved.

Eight enlisted men are assigned to the Columbine as guards. Five are master sergeants, one a technical sergeant and two staff sergeants. They maintain a 24-hour watch over the ship when it is on the ground. All of the guards qualify as sharpshooters on the Air Force pistol range.

This is the third presidential airplane. Roosevelt used a DC-4 called the Sacred Cow. Truman used a DC-6 called the Independence. The Columbine was built in 1948 and first used by former Air Force Secretaries Stuart Symington and Thomas Finletter. She had logged 650,000 miles in 3,000 air hours by the time Eisenhower took her over, a fact which may account for reports that a new Super-Constellation is now being built for the President. The Columbine's name, chosen by Eisenhower himself, is painted across the nose in a flowing script. Beneath it is a painting of the blue columbine, official flower of Mamie's home state of Colorado. Beside the main doorway is a small presidential shield. Otherwise, except for the Air Force lettering and serial number (8610), the Columbine's skin is as clean as a shark's.

The ship's capacity is 24 in addition to the crew of 11. The operational crew includes pilot, co-pilot, navigator, two flight engineers responsible for the engines and other mechanical equipment and a radio operator. Two flight stewards don white mess jackets en route to serve the President and his guests. Two of the eight airplane guards always travel with the plane. As another safety factor a technician from the Lockheed factory makes all flights.

The plane cabin is decorated in warm tones of gray. The lavatory in the tail section is large enough to be used as a dressing room. Immediately forward of the tail, on both sides of the main door, there is storage space for clothes, light luggage, odd gear and parachutes.

Solid comfort, close contact

THE President keeps a comfortable old tweed jacket aboard the Columbine at all times. As soon as he is aboard he slips out of his business coat and into the jacket. He rides in the 20-foot main cabin which takes up the waist of the ship. There are two specially built chairs for the President and Mrs. Eisenhower, stressed to withstand nine times the pull of gravity in any direction. They have three-inch foam rubber cushions and are covered in brown leather (the only exception to the gray decor). The chairs revolve so that the President can work at the table beside him or swing toward the other chair to talk. At the President's elbow are two telephones: one is an intercom for communication with the pilot and the crew, the other can be hooked into a land line as soon as the plane lands. A number of flight instruments on the wall enable the President to keep track of the plane's progress.

Across from the presidential chair is a small serving bar with a framed color photograph of the columbine blossom above it. Two long couches line the opposite walls at mid-cabin. At night they break down into two three-quarter-size beds. A small FM-AM radio is at the end of one of the couches.

Knowing that Western novels are the President's favorite reading, the crew keeps replenishing the plane's stock. A crewman explains, "We usually put a good Western out for the President and hope he'll put aside his stack of papers and relax with the book."

The Columbine has two duplicate cabins forward of the President's, with seats for 16 which can be made up into berths for eight. Thus the plane can sleep a total of 10.

The chief passenger likes light meals aloft and would as soon have cold cuts as steak. But the Columbine is equipped with a galley that would delight any housewife. It is complete down to the smallest details of electric toasters and a bottle of prepared martinis in the refrigerator. The electric stove is a bit small—only two burners and an oven—but there are additional gadgets for warming soup and keeping food hot.

Eating and sleeping on a regular schedule are a problem on long flights when the Columbine crosses two or three time zones. Colonel Draper pushes his boss around a little in this department. He times the flights to give him maximum rest, schedules meals and bedtime to make the best compromise between clock time and stomach time. Sometimes it is still daylight when Draper orders the beds made up and drops back to the President's cabin to say, "It's time to relax, Mr. President." Usually the obedient answer is simply, "Okay, Bill."

When the President interrupted his Colorado vacation last September to fly to Washington for the funeral of Chief Justice Vinson, he left Denver at 9 p.m. Draper ordered him to bed. It was midnight in Washington and he would be getting up at 4 a.m. Denver time.

Normally Draper flies the Columbine at 12,000 or 13,000 feet. At that altitude the cabin pressurizing system can hold inside pressure to that of 2,000 or 3,000 feet. If he went to 18,000 feet, which is a more normal flying altitude these days, inside pressure would climb to 8,000. "At the end of six or eight hours at a cabin altitude of 8,000 the President would feel like he had put in a hard day's work even though he had just sat and read," Draper explains.

Draper was picked as presidential pilot from the Pentagon's crackerjack "special missions squadron," which pilots top civilian and military brass. No pilot gets into the squadron if he has ever had a single aircraft accident, in training or later. The Air Force believes that some persons are "accident prone," others are not.

Since he was a kid in the tiny town of Stow Corners, Ohio, Bill Draper has believed that the only reason any sensible person wanted to live was to be able to fly. He was working for Pan American when the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor. The U.S. took over Pan Am's new African route and simultaneously offered Draper a commission. Until the end of the war he pushed converted B-24s and C-54s across the Atlantic, Africa and India to the Assam Valley on the south side of "the Hump." After the war he stayed on in the Air Force. He had become chief pilot of the "brass hat" squadron before he first met and flew the President in December 1950.

Eisenhower was then making a special survey of NATO for President Truman. Draper picked him up in New York and flew him to Washington for briefings. Mamie was along on the New York-to-Washington flight, and she shocked the man at the wheel by telling him, "in no uncertain terms," as he recalls, that she did not like flying.

The President, who once had a pilot's license, prefers flying whenever possible. On this inspection trip, his first with Draper, winter weather allowed only two touch-downs, out of dozens of landings in clear flying conditions, but he never murmured, not even when Draper took him into Copenhagen with the ceiling under 100 feet.

The President kept Draper as his personal pilot when he went back to Europe as SHAPE commander. Mamie flew all the way this time and, Draper felt, some missionary work was in order. He told Mrs. Eisenhower he felt he had lined up the best crew on earth, and he looked forward to having her as a real member of the crew. Then he launched into his blue-plate special lecture. It goes substantially like this:

"I firmly believe an airplane is so much safer than an automobile that I can't even compare the two. I'd rather fly any time than drive on these highways today, never knowing when you will come up against a driver who can't tell the difference between red and green or who can't judge the difference between 50 and 100 feet or who is drunk. The most dangerous part about an airplane trip is the ride to and from the airport. I hate to get in a taxi at the airport, especially when I am in uniform. The driver sees those wings and immediately decides I want to fly. I have to tell him to slow down."

After nine months and more than 22,000 miles of flying with Draper at the controls, even Mamie relaxes in the air. The whole family is sold on him. Mrs. John S. Doud, Mamie's mother, a spry 75, likes the way Draper and company do things so much that she has been known to slip out to Washington MATS Terminal and fly with the boys on practice flights.

Mamie herself proudly and confidently wears a pair of pilot's wings with the word "Columbine" engraved at the center. She has joined Draper's crew.

A 24-HOUR WATCH is kept over Columbine. Here S/Sgt. Marvin E. Long stands guard. Bag holds register for visitors.

FOUR-BEDROOM BARGAIN FOR $8,695

Best buy in low-cost development houses recognizes the fact that U.S. families are growing bigger

Americans learned a lot about current values in mass builders' homes during the past two weeks as 8,000 new houses in 125 cities were thrown open to the public for National Home Week. As some 10 million people tramped through the exhibits, they found that the square footage in the average development home has increased from 700 in 1948 to almost 1,000 square feet; that two-thirds of builder houses now have three bedrooms; that storage space is ample, averages 10% of the area of the house.

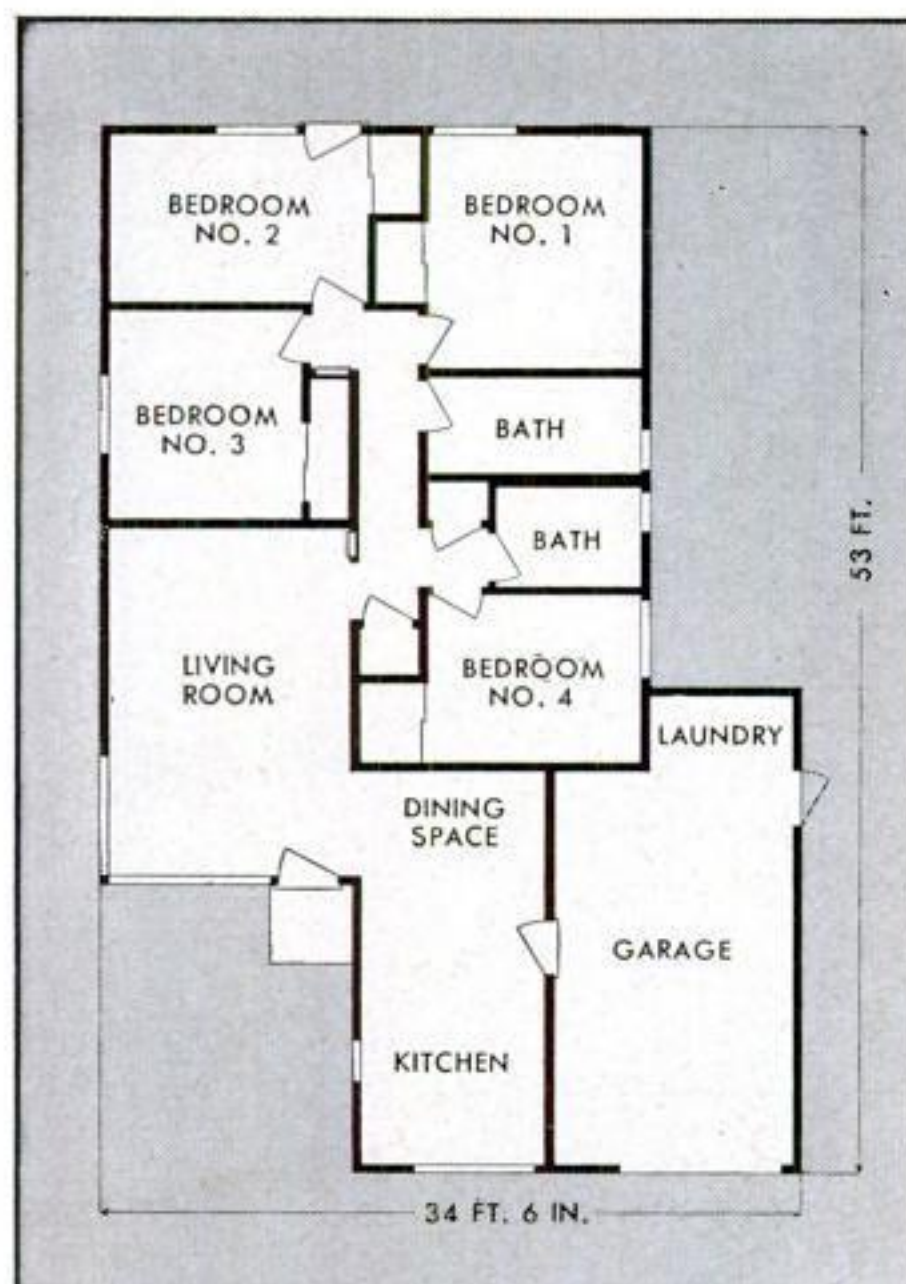

Typical of the trend—in fact the most astonishing buy in the show—was Earl Smith's four-bedroom house shown here which will be built in 14 developments in northern California. Builder Smith recognizes the fact that there has been a significant rise in the number of third and fourth children in U.S. families (LIFE, Feb. 2), and more rooms are needed. His and a more luxurious four-bedroom house built by J. L. Eichler and Sons (next page) each received an Award of Merit from LIFE's editors.

FRUIT TREES, SHRUBS, FENCE, LOT ARE INCLUDED IN THE PRICE

Earl Smith's new four-bedroom house (above) has a pleasant modern exterior, and large living room windows. The walls are stucco, available in any of eight pastel colors. The entrance has a redwood screen with a trellis top. The lot, which averages 50 by 100, is included in the $8,695 price. So are fruit trees, shrubs, seeded lawn and fence around the back yard. An unusually wide garage provides excellent storage space. There are two full baths, both with a tub and shower. The rear bedroom has a door leading to the back yard, which would be convenient for children or give privacy to grandparents living with the family. The heating is provided by two gas wall-furnaces which might leave some of the living areas chilly.

PLAN of 1,161-square-foot house is good though three bedrooms must be entered from living room.

BEDROOMS are small, have only one window but provide large family with comforting privacy.

KITCHEN has ceramic tile drainboard and counter with splashback. Cabinets, fan come with house.

EXTERIOR OF HOUSE IS VERTICAL REDWOOD SIDING. ROOF IS FINISHED WITH CRUSHED ROCK. FOUNDATION IS CONCRETE SLAB WITH RADIANT HEATING.

from the kitchen and hall, make convenient storage space. Built-in table is behind screen (background). An especial luxury is the cork floors. Ceiling is redwood with fir beams. Walls are mahogany plywood.

MASTER BEDROOM opens to enclosed patio at rear. Storage in all four bedrooms is excellent, especially in master bedroom which connects with an elegant private bath-dressing room. The house is planned so that all bedrooms have privacy and so that the master bedroom is particularly separate and quiet. House shown in these pictures has been thought by architect whose furnishings are shown.

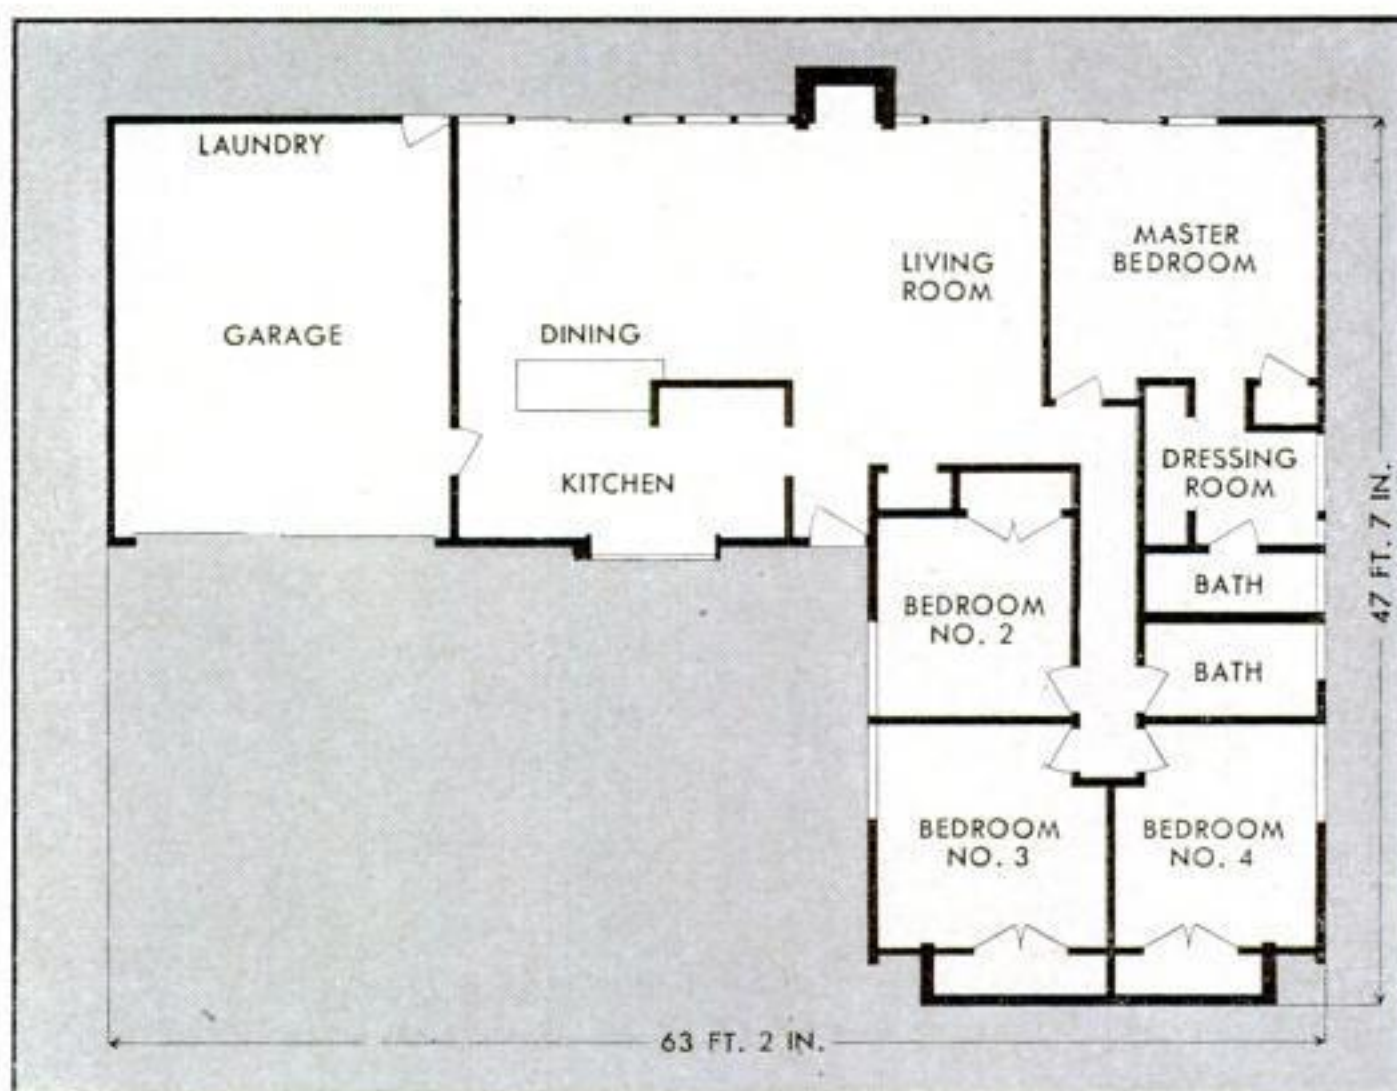

LIFE IS LIVED IN REAR OF HOUSE. SLIDING WINDOWS FROM LIVING AND BEDROOM OPEN TO PATIO

HANDSOME FOUR-BEDROOM BUILDER HOUSE COSTS $22,500

Exhibited by J. L. Eichler and Sons in Palo Alto, Calif., this 1,600-square-foot house with four bedrooms is an excellent value in the middle price range. Its 80-by-100 landscaped lot and its fence are included in the price, as are the concrete drive, walks and enclosed patio. Excellent equipment comes with the house. It has an electric range, garbage disposer, ventilating fan, wiring for a 220-volt electric dryer.

Top quality materials are used throughout—chromium clothes rods, laminated plastic self-edged kitchen counter tops and stainless steel sinks. There are two full baths, and both tubs have sliding glass enclosures. The two-car garage has rough plumbing for a laundry. But since there would be no room to work if two cars were in the garage, it is what the trade facetiously calls a one-and-a-half car garage.

FLOOR PLAN shows openness of living areas, which gives the house its spacious feeling and yet manages to provide privacy for inhabitants. Best points are long, well-lighted kitchen with large built-in dining table connecting it to dining area. Storage throughout is well planned, as are entrances and flow of traffic.

SUBURBANITE SNOW TIRE PROVES AMAZING TRACTION

Suburbanite wins tug of war on ice! We chained two identical cars back to back on a frozen lake. We fired the starting gun, and the tug of war was on.

The flexible cleats of the Suburbanite clamped down on the ice and started pulling with no slipping, no skidding, but just a strong, steady pull. The Suburbanite-equipped car started across the ice.

The rear tires on the other car pulled for a second and started to slip, to spin, and lost all pulling power.

The Suburbanite-equipped car pulled the other car clear across the lake. That's what we mean by greater traction!

Suburbanite by GOODYEAR

Suburbanite, T.M. —The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, Akron, Ohio

WINS TUG OF WAR ON ICE! IN GRUELLING WINTER TESTS!

There's only one way to show what a winter tire will do. That's to take it out on the snow and ice and put it through its paces!

That's exactly what we did. We ran comparison tests in deep snow, on hard-packed snow and on ice. And in every single test, the Suburbanite proved its superiority. This tire will outpull, outstop, outperform, under the toughest conditions, other winter tires on the market.

The new Suburbanite will give almost twice the starting traction, up to 39% more stopping traction than regular tires . . . yet it's quieter, infinitely quieter, than other winter tires!

Put a pair of Suburbanites on your rear wheels and you'll get through! Goodyear, Akron 16, Ohio.

Test driver takes slippery curve at 40 mph! In this test, the first car was equipped with regular tires. It hit this snow-packed turn at 40 mph, skidded out of control. The Suburbanite-equipped car took the same icy turn at 40, without a slip! That's proof of Suburbanites' superior traction!

Suburbanites pull up snow-filled driveway! With most tires, you'd probably need cinders to get up this driveway. With Suburbanites, all the driver needed was the accelerator. This tire gives you almost twice the starting traction of a regular tire—up to 39% more stopping traction!

Here's the secret of the Suburbanite miracle tread!

1. This wide winter tread is made up of 464 flexible cleats with 1856 sharp edges. These cleats dig in like claws for greater traction in snow—better grip on ice.

2. Cleats are set on a scientifically designed, nonskid angle. Angled edges cut down side-slip and skids on wet roads, and even on ice and packed snow.

3. On cleared highways, flat tread runs quietly, smoothly. The Suburbanite is much quieter than other snow tires.

Drive carefully on icy roads—the life you save may be your own.

WADING IN HEAVY SURF STIRRED UP BY TAIL END OF HURRICANE, FISHERMAN CASTS FOR STRIPED BASS AT SQUIBNOCKET BEACH ON MARTHA'S VINEYARD

STALKING THE STRIPER

Boom in bass fishing lures thousands of new anglers into the dark, salty surf

The nocturnal angler above is engaged in a form of self-torment which, despite its discomforts, provides such tingling excitement that thousands of new addicts are being lured into the surf each year. Along a thousand miles of the eastern seaboard from Cape Fear to Nova Scotia surf fishermen can be seen braving the breakers as they cast triple-hooked plugs into the dark sea. Their waterproof parkas and chest-high waders seldom keep them from getting soaked. Worse yet, they seldom catch any fish. But when they do it makes up for a hundred fishless nights, for their quarry, the wily striped bass, is big, hard-striking and thrilling to reel in.

The big boom in striped bass fishing took hold shortly after the war. It was set off by a fishing derby at Martha's Vineyard, Mass., which is now holding its eighth annual competition, and kept going by talk of 50-pounders lurking just offshore. One of the sport's chief attractions is the fact that anybody can become a "striper" stalker for as little as $10. All he needs is a bamboo pole, a cheap reel and 250 yards of line. But the cost of catching striped bass runs up for some enthusiasts who patrol select strips of coast in specially equipped "beach buggies" (p. 112). They sleep in them by day and drive at night to the place where the bass ought to be.

Newest thing on wings THE NEW DOUGLAS

Coast-to-coast non-stop—7½ hours! The new DC-7 has a top speed of 410 m.p.h.; cruises at 365 m.p.h. No other U.S. airliner can go so fast—Los Angeles to New York in 7½ hours, New York to London in 10 hours. The huge, graceful DC-7 is 109 feet long and has a wing spread of 117½ feet.

13,000 horsepower—hushed to a sleepy hum! Four giant Curtiss-Wright engines generate 13,000 horsepower. Jet turbines recover power that would be lost through the exhausts and send it to the propellers. Inside the plane, the big engines are effectively hushed by the most modern sound-proofing materials.

Uses new wonder metal, titanium! In the DC-7 titanium is used extensively in an airliner for the first time. Douglas pioneered the use of titanium in jet military planes. This lightweight, rustless metal has high strength at high temperatures—is ideal for engine nacelles and other uses.

DC-7

America's fastest and most luxurious airliner starts service soon

An extra air conditioner works while the DC-7 is on the ground at airports, as well as in flight. At all times, the cabin temperature stays in the pleasant 70's, even though the outside air may range from 120° above zero to 60° below. The air is perfectly humidified, too. And it is circulated without drafts.

Expect a smooth flight when you go by DC-7! The size and power of this big airliner make it remarkably steady in flight. It is pressurized to fly high above the clouds, where the air is sunny and smooth. And its long range permits the DC-7 to detour around many weather disturbances!

64 already ordered by four leading airlines—American, Delta-C & S, National and United. Many more orders are being negotiated. First scheduled flights will be made in the near future—watch your newspaper for the dates. Plan to make a trip soon in a DC-7. See how swift, luxurious and dependable it is!

LOW BACKS

Bare style is back for evening, new for cocktails

The startling invention of the strapless dress in the '30s pushed the low-backed evening dress with straps right out of fashion. With a public grown jaded on strapless tops and plunging necklines, the exposed back is back for evening and is also appearing in bold new versions for cocktails (above). Unlike the strapless dress, which couples boning with the principle of compensating tension and cannot be cut very low in back (or it would go down just as low in front), the new dresses are slung from the shoulders, from halter tops or from narrow straps. They dive as far as the wearer dares. A more mature fashion than most, it requires a smooth, filled-out back. To attain one quickly, Beauty Expert Elizabeth Arden recommends applying make-up and buffing the back with a chamois.

BAREBACK GEOMETRY in cocktail dresses offers oval (left, Ceil Chapman, $85), deep V on Givenchy (Rudolf, $125) and square (Larry Aldrich, $125).

"They Even Put Waste to Work..."

EDWARD R. MURROW Interviews 5 Well-Known Oilmen—Hears How The Oil Industry Makes Sure You Get The Most From Each Drop of Oil

MEET THE PANEL:

I'm General Ernest O. Thompson, Chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission—a conservation agency of our state charged by law to prevent waste of natural resources like oil and gas. We set oil and gas production for Texas—controlling 146,000 wells.

My name is E. DeGolyer. I'm a geologist and an independent oil producer, Chairman of DeGolyer-McNaughton, Petroleum Engineers. My chief interest is in the exploration of oil and the estimation of oil reserves.

My name is George L. Parkhurst. I'm Chairman of the Board of the Oronite Chemical Company, San Francisco. I'm concerned with petro-chemicals and also with other phases of the oil industry.

I'm John M. Lovejoy, Chairman of the Board of the Seaboard Oil Company of Delaware. This is solely a producing oil company with a production of 33,000 barrels a day in various parts of the United States.

My name is John W. Newton. I am Vice-President of the Magnolia Petroleum Company, in charge of refining. At this time, I am also serving as Vice-President for refining, American Petroleum Institute.

Here are the highlights of Mr. Murrow's interview—one of the most important discussions ever held on conserving the nation's oil supply, and its significance to you as an American:

MURROW: Dr. DeGolyer—you're one of the greatest geologists in this or any other country—how much oil do we have available in the U.S.?

De GOLYER: About 30 billion barrels in proven resources—almost 4 times what we had in 1925.

MURROW: Are we finding as much oil here as we're using up?

De GOLYER: The available statistics indicate that, yes, on the average, we have found as much oil each year as we've used.

MURROW: I'd like to ask—what's happened to the wasteful, old-fashioned gusher we used to see?

THOMPSON: Well, in the old open flow days, every man got all he could under "devil-take-the-hindmost" production. That was very wasteful. Wells would blow their heads off, gush for a while, then go flat.

NEWTON: In 1901 in Beaumont, Texas, we had America's original gushers at "Spindletop." One flowed at the rate of 100,000 barrels a day, but only for a short time. In contrast with today's efficient practice, little of the oil in the ground was recovered.

THOMPSON: In those days we recovered only 25 to 30% of the oil in the ground. In East Texas today, by carefully conserving reservoir energy, we are not content unless we get up to 80% recovery.

MURROW: What do you mean by conserving reservoir energy? Is this a key problem in oil conservation?

De GOLYER: It's the basic problem—keeping the pressure on the oil in the reservoir. An oil field has been best compared to a bottle of soda water. If the bottle is opened and the gas is allowed to escape, the thing goes flat. If an oil field is produced wide open and the pressure gets too low, then the field goes flat and you lose a lot of oil which you never recover.

EDWARD R. MURROW'S ROUNDTABLE on oil conservation practices brought 5 outstanding oilmen to his CBS Radio studio in New York. Mr. Murrow questioned his guests (identi-

MURROW: Would someone please explain to me how oilmen inject gas or water to get more oil out of the ground?

LOVEJOY: If your natural forces become exhausted, then you have to pump in water or gas to provide artificial forces. The best time to do this is before the natural forces are exhausted. In the New Hope Field of East Texas, natural forces were very small compared to the size of the reservoir. The wells stopped flowing before the field was completely drilled.

By putting in an artificial water flood before the natural pressures were gone, we've maintained production there for many years.

MURROW: What are oilmen doing to conserve oil once it gets to the refinery?

NEWTON: I'd like to comment on that. We've developed new refining processes, principally catalytic cracking, alkylation, polymerization, etc. and learned how to make

For a new free booklet on oil conservation, "Oil Con-Serves For You," write to Oil Industry Information Committee, of the success of the oil industry in this country. In the countries where governments themselves have tried to develop their own resources, they have been completely unsuccessful. To illustrate, in Russia they have not been able to increase their oil production materially over the last twenty years—and their oil potentialities are vast.

De GOLYER: The 13,000 small and large producers in the U.S. don't all think alike. I might look at all the data on a certain prospect and decide it didn't justify the cost of a well. Mr. Lovejoy might think differently and drill it. Even if both of us thought it was bad, there would be some third fellow who came along and drilled it. That's one reason we find as much oil as we do, and find it as fast as we have.

PARKHURST: Mr. Newton has mentioned new refining processes and improvements in products. This has been stimulated greatly by competition in research. Companies, large and small, all competing to bring out a better product and do a better job of processing the crude oil, have made a great contribution—

MURROW: —So that good conservation practices extend throughout the entire industry?

PARKHURST: That's true. Going beyond production and refineries, conservation never ceases. The oil industry has worked with the automotive people, equipment manufacturers and consumers to get better use out of oil products and to give better value.

Our lubricating oils have been improved to the point where engine overhauls are much less frequent. An automobile will go farther on a gallon of gasoline. Fuel oil has been upgraded by more efficient combustion and better oil burners. And, so, conservation extends from the oil in the ground to the final, individual user.

fied at left) for over 2 hours. This entire interview was recorded on tape. Its highlights are reproduced on these pages to bring you one of the most important discussions ever held on conserving the nation's oil supply. Scale model of oil derrick in background was used to illustrate technical questions on conservation in oil production.

better use of gases formed in some of these operations. Compared to years ago, twice the quantity of useful products can now be obtained from a barrel of crude.

MURROW: That's conservation indeed.

NEWTON: We are now able to meet the requirements of the public out of 21½ billion barrels of crude yearly. Without these many process improvements we would have used about 5 billion barrels of crude oil last year.

Also, oil products have constantly been made better. The fact that two gallons of today's gasoline do the work that three did in 1925 shows an outstanding achievement in quality. This is real conservation.

MURROW: Mr. Newton, I wonder if you could tell us a little about some of the other products you people make from oil?

NEWTON: Petroleum products go into production of insecticides, fungicides, antifreeze, detergents, etc. Today there are something like a thousand different products of varying types made from petroleum.

MURROW: This is down your line, Mr. Parkhurst. What about the use of petroleum products in the manufacture of synthetic rubber?

PARKHURST: That's very important. Nearly all synthetic rubber today comes from petroleum. Other things in the same general category are plastics, paints, textile fibres—great varieties of things we don't normally think of as petroleum products.

MURROW: Somebody told me you were even conserving the smell of oil these days. Is this true?

NEWTON: Yes. There is one smell that is being conserved and actually being used. That's in the recovery of sulphur. With some oils, sulphur gases are generated, which we can recover and so make possible their conversion to sulphuric acid. This acid helps manufacture hundreds of products.

PARKHURST: That's an example of a by-product which was not only a waste—its smell was a nuisance. Taking that waste product and upgrading it into a valuable chemical is an excellent example of conservation.

MURROW: With all the thousands of companies engaged in the oil business, how much has competition contributed to oil conservation?

LOVEJOY: I think competition is probably the secret

EDWARD R. MURROW SUMS UP...

It seems to me, that these five distinguished oilmen say this:

Nature has given us a wealth of petroleum, but it is not necessarily inexhaustible. Man, through his skills and ingenuity, has converted petroleum to his own use. And now man—the oil industry—is trying through sound conservation to assure us:

FIRST, that the maximum amount of oil is produced from each field.

SECOND, that researchers are finding new ways to provide new oil supplies for the future.

THIRD, that oil, once taken from the ground, is processed efficiently to meet the consumer's needs.

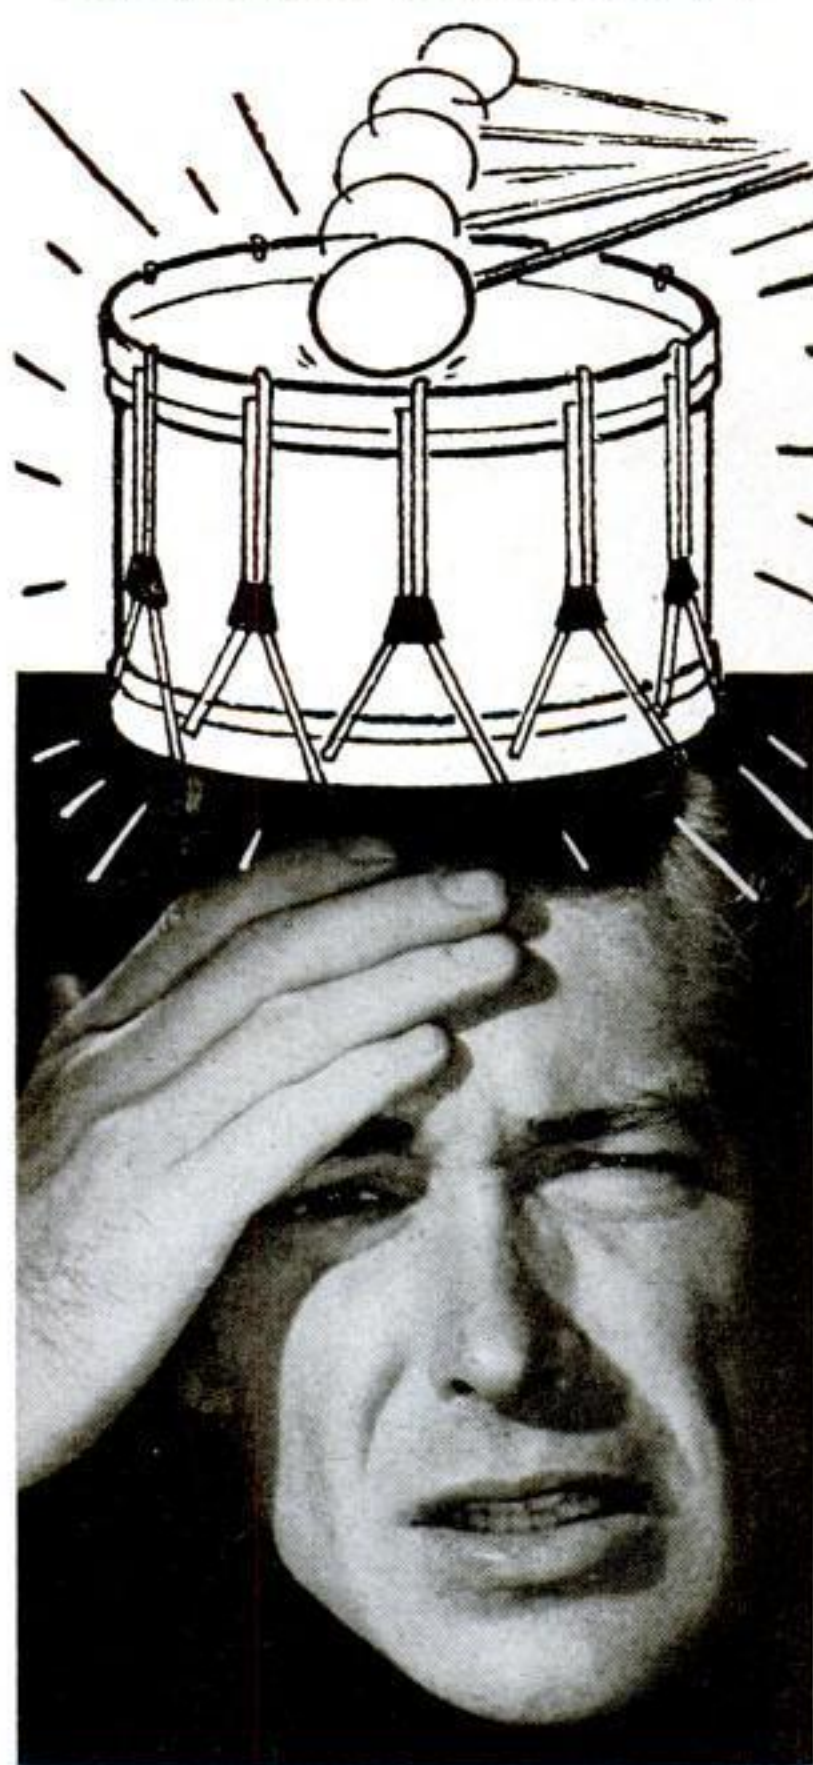

The one thing I already knew was that all this pays off in effective service to the public.

Hear Edward R. Murrow on CBS Radio, Monday through Friday; see "Person to Person," his new TV show, CBS-TV Friday nights.

The set was almost broken when Rev was 2 and lost a sandal in an auto accident, but two months later, passing the scene, Mr. Tyler spotted a weatherbeaten object, collected the missing sandal.

Voices of Authors

NOTED WRITERS RECORD THEIR OWN WORK

The first thing Edison did with his new recording machine in 1877 was to give a literary reading: he recited "Mary had a little lamb" into it. But recording companies since then have never fully developed this literary field or exploited the pleasure people get out of being read to. Recently, with readings becoming one of the most popular forms of theatrical entertainment, an album of Shaw's Don Juan in Hell became a best-seller. Pursuing this trend, Columbia Records this week released the most ambitious collection of readings put on the market, a $100 album of authors reciting their own works: John Steinbeck, Aldous Huxley, Edna Ferber, William Saroyan, Christopher Isherwood, Katherine Anne Porter, John Collier, Truman Capote, Somerset Maugham and Edith, Osbert and Sacheverell Sitwell. The album devotes one hour-long LP record to each of the writers, who, recording over a two-year period, brought to this unaccustomed task a great intensity and variety of techniques and expressions.

A FATHER OUT OF TIME, PLACE

Sir Osbert Sitwell, brother of Edith, reads from his volume of memoirs, Left Hand, Right Hand, a description of his father who "... gifted though he was, spent his life apart, alone. Indelibly stained with gothic darkness and its accompanying colors, pure and soft... his mind inhabited that ivory tower of the 13th century, complete with every convenience of the time—crossbows, battlements, oubliettes, and thumbscrews. Like an elephant, he carried his castle on his back, or, after the manner of a snail, could retire into it for dark hours and a hard winter...."

EDNA FERBER READS WITH VEHEMENCE

THE GAY OLD DOG IN THE LOOP

Edna Ferber, who also recorded parts of her Show Boat, read her description of the hero in The Gay Old Dog, a short story about a Chicagoan: "Jo Hertz was a Loophound.... When a new Loop cafe was opened, Jo's table always commanded an unobstructed view of anything worth viewing. On entering, he was wont to say, 'Hello, Gus' with careless cordiality to the headwaiter, the while his eye roved expertly from table to table as he removed his gloves. He ordered things under glass... his table, at midnight... resembled a hotbed that favors the bell system."

JOHN STEINBECK SNARLS HIS WORDS

BASSO WITH BEER AND A 'BEAR'

Unlike other authors, who sipped tea and coffee in the recording studios, John Steinbeck swigged beer, spoke in a deep bass, made grunting noises during his playbacks. Reading from Johnny Bear: "His black matted head bobbed forward and his long arms hung out as though he should have been on all fours and was only standing upright as a trick. . . . On his face there was a foolish happy smile. He moved forward and for all his bulk . . . he seemed to creep. . . . At the bar he stopped, his little bright eyes went about from face to face expectantly, and he asked 'whisky?'"

MISS BOBBIT AND HER BLUE LACE

PORTRAIT OF A REBEL AND JUDAS

In a hypnotically silken voice, Katherine Anne Porter read from Flowering Judas: "Braggioni loves himself with such tenderness . . . and eternal charity that his followers . . . warm themselves in the reflected glow. . . . Not for nothing has Braggioni taken pains to be a good revolutionist . . . professional lover of humanity. He will never die of it. He has the malice, the cleverness, the wickedness, the sharpness of wit, the hardness of heart . . . for loving the world profitably. . . . He will live to see himself kicked out from his feeding trough by other . . . world-saviours!"

PORTRAIT OF THREE FAT WOMEN

The job of recording inspired such concentration in Somerset Maugham that he almost completely overcame his stammer. He grimaced (above) while he went through The Three Fat Women of Antibes: "They would have been independent of anyone else if they had not needed a fourth at bridge. . . . 'It's such a bore. We can't get cream here,' she said. 'It's one of the things one has to do without on the Riviera.' . . . Presently, they dried their tears and had a little brandy and water, which every doctor had told them was the least fattening thing they could drink. . . ."

Autumn in the Shenandoah

BRIGHT SPLASHES ADD SPARKLE TO LAND OF RICH, SOMBER COLOR

PHOTOGRAPHED FOR LIFE BY ALFRED EISENSTAEDT

The autumn of each year casts a rich tapestry of somber reds, bronzes and muted purples over the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia. It lies smooth over the rounded Blue Ridge mountaintops, crumbles into narrow gorges, cascades down to the neat, white farm buildings and trim, patterned squares of green pasture and brown plowland in the valley below. This is historic ground, one of the great courses of battle during the Civil War.

Looking down from the Skyline Drive as it winds near the crest of the ridge, the traveler can see the heavy haze of color pierced here and there by sudden sharp stabs of brilliant red and yellow, from the occasional maples and birches in forests that are predominantly oak. And if he goes walking through forest clearings and mountain meadows, he will find a splendid scattering of golden leaves, fiery berries, dazzling white milkweeds. The profusion of color is at its peak for a few days in mid-October but lingers on another month. As recorded on these pages, it is one of America's great seasonal spectacles.

RED AND GOLD, a cluster of maple leaves blazes beside a mountain trail. Rich red hues result when cold prevents sugar in the leaf from running off through stem.

VERMILION berries of the mountain ash are a favorite food for birds. This shrub is rarely seen below 3,000 feet, is here growing at the brink of a precipitous cliff.

CORN SHED in old barn holds wagonload of feed. On the barn wall is nailed a dead marsh hawk. They are relentlessly hunted though they kill rodents which eat corn.

WHITE FEATHERS of milkweed make a delicate decoration in meadows and fields. Clusters of feathers are blown by wind to carry seeds up and down valley.

CORN SHOCKS dot farm fields on the rolling floor of the valley near the town of Berryville. They are allowed to stand until snow starts, then are fed to the cattle.

BY STAGNANT POOL in forest on the western side of the valley a pale yellow Interrupted Fern is dying while birch and maple trees drop their leaves to the ground.

AN AUTUMN HAZE lies over the mountains (right) which are seen from high on Tanner's Ridge. Growing on foreground slopes are masses of red huckleberry bushes.

Through generations past, Old Crow's superior Kentucky quality has won for it the high praise and public recognition of some of America's most celebrated men. ## "The Greatest Name in Bourbon"

The famous Old Crow Distillery meets the public demand for a lighter and milder prestige bourbon by offering an 86 Proof bottling of the whiskey Daniel Webster called "the finest in the world." It is a companion to world-famous Old Crow 100 Proof Bottled in Bond, but lower in proof and price.

Those of you who have been wanting a prestige bourbon that is lighter and milder in taste than Bottled in Bond can now enjoy Old Crow at 86 proof. And you can enjoy it at a considerably lower price, too, for the resultant savings in Federal excise taxes and other costs are being passed along to you.

Lafayette visits Kentucky—home of Old Crow

When you buy Old Crow, you buy America's most historic brand. From

The famous old spring house, Old Crow Distillery

those early days on the Kentucky frontier when Dr. James Crow first lent his scientific knowledge to the theretofore erratic distilling process, Old Crow has grown up with the nation. By the barrel it traveled to the picturesque ports of the Mississippi (and became the favorite of that river's most famous pilot—Mark Twain)—by the goblet it was raised in tribute to such distinguished guests as the Marquis de Lafayette, and to the performances of the incomparable Edwin Booth—by the demijohn it was recognized as the mark of genteel hospitality throughout the land.

Now, with the historic news that Old Crow is also available in a lighter, milder, lower priced bottling many millions more can enjoy "the greatest name in bourbon." Ask for Old Crow at the proof that best suits your taste—the lighter, milder 86 Proof, or the traditional 100 Proof Bottled in Bond.

A NEW LOOK,

Football is still lively as ever

Half a million people who watched their first college football games of the season last week were agreeably surprised to find the game as slam-bang and spectacular as ever. Warned that the passing of the two-platoon system would cause football to revert to a Stone Age of stagnation, they took delight in seeing halfbacks leap acrobatically for passes and hearing line-backers thump into ball carriers. The new rules (LIFE, May 11) state that a player who comes out of the game cannot go back in the same quarter. (Exception: anyone can go in during last four minutes of the second and fourth quarters.) Now, without an endless stream of specialists running in and out, the spectators

SOME OF THE NEW SIGHTS RESULTING FROM THE NEW RULES

FOUR FINGERS by referee, a new sign this year, indicates there are four minutes left in second or last quarter when all players become eligible again.

SUBSTITUTION CLERK becomes important. Here a Dartmouth student checks players taken out of game so that none go back in before they should.

ineligible. Here Washington and Lee's dead bench (beyond table) is filled, its live one almost empty.

OLD THRILLS

despite return to one platoon

could learn to know the players and keep track of who was playing.

In the day's thriller between Notre Dame and Oklahoma a handful of "iron men" played all but a few minutes in 94° heat. Games everywhere took less time to play, and there was hardly a pause in the action as the ball changed hands. Some of last year's specialists unused to playing all-around football were slow to convert. As a result some small colleges, like Mississippi Southern and William and Mary, who never had the manpower for real specialists and of necessity had always taught their players an all-around game, were able to surprise such first-rate powers as Alabama and Navy.

DENTED HELMET of William and Mary defender shows behind Navy ball carrier Bob Hepworth, and indicates fury of play in game's final quarter. With Navy's specialists unaccustomed to their new all-around roles, undermanned W. and M. managed to hold Navy to one touchdown and gain a 6-6 tie.

BENCHED HERO, Marvin Goux, first-string line-backer at U.S.C. last year, could not adapt himself to offense and was demoted to third-string guard.

UNIFORMS SUFFER because the players cannot leave game, change a jersey and come back. Here Notre Dame's Neil Worden is almost in tatters.

UNDERDOGS BENEFIT, at least sometimes, by rule change. Here W. and M. coach weeps with joy after tying Navy. "I'm too tickled to talk," he said.

TWO MINUTES to go (above), Lattner intercepts pass, is tackled by Melvin Brown (left). Last year he played both defense and offense, was All-American.

AFTER A HARD GAME under the hot Oklahoma sun, iron-man Lattner injures his leg and is helped off field under the watchful eye of Coach Frank Leahy.

MINNESOTA A ONE-MAN SHOW

PASSING, Paul Giel, talented Minnesota tailback, gets protection as he gets ready to throw the ball in the game against Southern California in Los Angeles.

GETTING LOOSE (below), 185-pound Giel, a brilliant runner, makes an eight-yard gain. One-platoon system will build up individual stars like Giel.

GETTING CAUGHT on defense (above), Giel lets U.S.C. receiver get behind him. Goat as well as hero, Giel's errors led to both of U.S.C.'s touchdowns.

EXHAUSTED after 67-yard run which set up Minnesota's only touchdown, Giel on sidelines puts ice pack on his head. He played 53 minutes.

Modern Art by a Nun

HER STATUES SELL FAST

Within the past five years, a gentle nun of Milwaukee has become one of the best known and fastest selling artists in the Midwest. She is Sister Mary Thomasita, a sculptor who has turned her talents to creating a distinctively unorthodox art for the Church. A graduate of the Art Institute of Chicago and now a teacher at Milwaukee's Cardinal Stritch College, Sister Thomasita spends most of her time teaching classes in art or lecturing to housewives on interior decoration. But her spare time is devoted to carving giant crucifixes, making ceramic images of the Stations of the Cross, even molding symbolic designs on silver wedding rings. Although her stylized modern sculpture prompts occasional protests from Church officials, Sister Thomasita is besieged with commissions for her religious art. This fall an exhibition of her work is going on a Midwest tour.

New Orleans Dolls Up for 'Kind Sir'

MARTIN, BOYER TEST PLAY WITH TOP ADVANCE SALE

The theater season's first big event took place two weeks ago, not on Broadway, but in New Orleans. It was a tryout of Kind Sir, a comedy by Norman Krasna, which costarred Mary Martin, America's most lustrous musical comedy queen, and Charles Boyer, the illustrious Hollywood lover. New Orleans hospitably gushed over to welcome its first pre-Broadway tryout, and especially to greet Director-Producer Joshua Logan who grew up in Louisiana. For the gala opening both the town and the townspeople were all dolled up. Big signs told Logan he was welcome and pink satin programs were bestowed upon the entire audience.

Kind Sir, which gives Mary Martin her first role since South Pacific and the first nonsinging role she ever tackled, makes it clear she doesn't have to sing for a living. She is charming as Jane Kimball, a famous star who has been too busy acting to fall in love. In Act I she meets Charles Boyer who confesses he is already married. In Act II she loves him anyway. In Act III she is furious—most of the time. Kind Sir is pleasant entertainment that will benefit by the polishing it will get before it hits Broadway in November. A $750,000 advance, record for a nonmusical, already has the show three quarters sold out for its season's run.

BOYER PERSISTS in kissing Mary Martin, though she is smoldering with anger because he wronged her.

← MARY RESISTS after his kiss, uses her tricks as an actress to convince him she has headache.

BESIDE SHACK IN WHICH 28 PEASANTS LIVE, SORE-EYED CHILDREN LOOK UP TO COMMUNIST PELLECEER WHO TELLS PARENTS, "I WILL SEE THEY GET MEDICAL ATTENTION"

THE RED OUTPOST IN CENTRAL AMERICA

Guatemala's Communists thrive under fellow-traveler government

PHOTOGRAPHED FOR LIFE BY CORNELL CAPA

In Guatemala, only two hours bombing time from the Panama Canal, this man in the checked shirt goes daily among the people, openly and diligently toiling to create a Communist state in Central America. He says boldly, "I am a Communist." His name is Carlos Manuel Pellecer (pronounced pay-yay-sayre) and he is a political paradox. Holding no government office except that of a mere deputy in congress, member of a political party whose very existence violates the country's constitution, he enjoys honor, prestige and power both in government and among the people.

Guatemala's Reds, a compact group in which Pellecer ranks No. 2, began to progress eight years ago by making themselves useful to Juan José Arévalo, first president after Dictator Jorge Ubico was overthrown in 1944. Making themselves useful, in turn, to Arévalo's successor, President Jacobo Arbenz, the Communists have prospered mightily. The Reds electioneer for Arbenz and help run his political machine. To assist him, they run the government radio and two dailies, using them only incidentally for their own propaganda. President Arbenz, an intense, humorless reformer, has two pet programs: land reform and elimination of "foreign (i.e., U.S.) monopolies." In each aim the Reds are his strongest backers.

In return the Communists enjoy what amounts to palace protection. They control the labor unions and the powerful National Confederation of Peasants, a farm workers' union. They have four deputies in congress, including Pellecer, elected as government-sponsored candidates. Government sound trucks spread the Red propaganda, including allegations of U.S. "germ warfare" in Korea. Recently the president of the congress pleased them by ordaining a moment of silent grief for Stalin. Their own party, the Labor Party, was set up in 1949 without a murmur of dissent, though the constitution expressly forbids "political organizations of international or foreign character." Arbenz, who is no Communist himself, looks upon the Reds as Guatemalans first and Reds second. He says he is using them; the evidence is at least as ample that they are using him.

RED LEADER Pellecer, now 33, learned his Communism in Central America. While a cadet in military school, he was jailed for writing against Dictator Jorge Ubico, later exiled. Working in U.S.-owned mine in Mexico, he studied Marx, led strikes. After revolution he returned home, became union organizer.

A COMRADE TO PEASANT AND PRESIDENT

Shrewd, persuasive, a dedicated Red, Pellecer knows how to hobnob with presidents. And, though a fancy dresser by peasant standards, he knows even better how to keep the common touch. He keeps it best through Arbenz' Law 900, by which land taken from big landlords (compensated by long-term bonds) is given to peasants. Because the program's local executive committees are drawn from the Red-run unions, the Communists virtually control it.

Pellecer is always there when land is given out. He is there not to give it, for this is the government's function, but to make it seem that he did. To a people 73% illiterate, 64% barefoot and 86% landless after 30 centuries under Indian caciques (chiefs), Spanish conquistadors and dictators, Pellecer seems a messiah of overdue salvation. When Santo Tomas, the confiscated estate of ex-Dictator Ubico, was distributed Pellecer told the campesinos (farm hands), "Comrades, we must go ahead. Let's ask for Concepcion!" Three months later they got Concepcion, a plantation.

At another, still private plantation, he told the campesinos, "Take the land; it is yours by right." Taking land, they quarreled in some cases, and some were killed. No problem is too small for Pellecer. He is as willing to promise a new baseball field as better drinking water—and to give Communism the credit for both.

WITH THE PRESIDENT, Pellecer exchanges handshake at Guatemala's independence day celebration.

TAKING CHARGE as unofficial boss, Pellecer speaks at land distribution ceremony. Actual government functionaries, behind, look on tamely as Red tells peasants, "A new world is on the march, comrades."

INSPECTING WATER, Pellecer hears laborers say it is putrid. He advises strike against employer.

TALKING BASEBALL with village team, Pellecer promises "all I can do" to get a new diamond built.

VISITING WAREHOUSE, Pellecer chats with workmen sacking up last of coffee. He answers questions of workers about land reform, promises to telephone somebody's sister on his return to Guatemala City.

ORGANIZING FARM HANDS, he says that Arbenz (big picture on wall), plans to give them plantation.

UNITED FRUIT'S 65,000-ACRE TIQUISATE PLANTATION, ALL IT HAS LEFT OUT OF 299,000-ACRE FARM, ENDS AT JUNGLE EDGE (BACKGROUND) WHERE GOVERNMENT HAS TAKEN OVER

UNITED FRUIT AS

Forever in need of something to hate, Communism finds itself sharing a ready-made target with the obsessively nationalistic President Arbenz in Guatemala. The U.S.-owned United Fruit Company has a long history of unpopularity there. At first it was resented legitimately as an exploiter; since 1945, after recognizing its errors, it has been attacked despite the $2 million it spends each year to better the welfare of its workers.

Recently, because it pays higher wages than the usual 26¢ a day, United Fruit has been hated by Guatemala's old-line feudal plantation owners who, paradoxically, also hate Arbenz and the Reds. Even longer and more generally, the company has been hated by Guatemalans who accuse it of manipulating dictators, taking its profits to the U.S. and paying imported employees better than native. Many other Guatemalans hate it too for controlling the Puerto Barrios waterfront, where the United Fruit's white ships dock, and the railroad to Guatemala City, on which, they say, United Fruit gives more consideration to a banana than to a Guatemalan.

Hatred, however, never cost United Fruit anything until last winter when, egged on by the Reds, the government expropriated 234,000 acres of the company's reserve land. Gloomily watching 2,000 squatters move in, the company was hit again in August when 174,000 more acres were taken. The government has offered to pay, at official tax valuation, a price so low that the company refuses to accept it. Now, though still making money, United Fruit talks about being forced to get out altogether.

TAUNTING COMPANY on home grounds, sign "against foreign intervention," put up by union, hangs over building in banana loading depot at Puerto Barrios.

BENEFITS, BOONDOGGLES

The strange Arbenz-Communism partnership has brought some undeniable benefits to Guatemalans. Land is being distributed among people who have always been landless. Livestock and seed loans are being distributed to put the new farmers in business. Diversification is being taught to keep them in business and to save Guatemala from the perils of raising only two crops, coffee and bananas. Great dreams are in progress; schools are being built and a 193-mile highway is being pushed, in a frenzy of energy and pride, from the capital to the coast; a huge hydro-electric development is being planned.

But the dreams outrun the reality, and the land is littered with the dismal failures of revolutionary boondoggles. The half-finished National Library stands gaunt and bookless in Guatemala City, deserted in favor of more urgent dreams. The Pan-American highway ends in a blank, 35 miles short of the Mexican border. The 1,000-bed Franklin D. Roosevelt Hospital, planned boastfully as the finest in all Central America, stands useless in a field—staffless, patientless, $1.5 million short of completion. A model village that cost $4.5 million stands empty and scorned in a jungle; no road was built to reach it. Despite the failures, President Arbenz foresees a modern, transformed economy in 20 years. Doubters, viewing his sinister partners and remembering the example of the Communist "agrarian reformers" of China, fear another sort of transformation.

SIGNATURE BY THUMBPRINT registers illiterate new landowner for government seed loan. Borrowers get money at once and in cash, from $55 to $90 each.

A PRIVATE JOKE draws satisfied, half-hidden smirk from winner of mule. When somebody sneered mule had no tongue, he retorted, "Mules aren't for talking."

HIS OWN LAND, the first he has ever owned, brings a grizzled farmer down on his haunches to feel of the soil while his eyes look out proudly over the 30 acres which have been allotted to him. Though he gets occupancy and the right to till the soil, actual title remains vested in the government and he cannot sell it.

UNFINISHED HOSPITAL is mules' backdrop. Job was dropped when funds ran low and government discovered there were not enough nurses, doctors to staff it.

UNTENANTED VILLAGE of Poptún shelters only caretaker and his dog. Nobody would live in these 26 model houses because village can only be reached by air.

CHAMPAGNE FOR THE PEONS

The Communists have opposition, but it is divided, leaderless and not efficient. It comes most ardently from the wrong place, the coffee barons who for too long have themselves exploited the land and their fellow citizens. They mutter and scheme against the Reds and Arbenz' reforms. But having no great stomach for the fight, some of them are cannily exporting their wealth against the day of flight. The Catholic Church also resists the Reds as do many students of Guatemala University and, oddly enough, many among the work-hardened market women of Guatemala City. They get no help from Arbenz. Though he knows Communism's upsurge has cost him the profitable U.S. tourist trade and caused the withholding of U.S. aid, the president still has reason to hold his course with confidence. Guatemala still has a rock-hard currency, a piddling public debt, a healthy dollar reserve. Bad times might come with a crop failure or a drop in coffee prices. But meanwhile the Communist leaders know they have little to fear in a land where José Manuel Fortuny, Guatemala's No. 1 Red, can summon a cabinet officer at will, and where barefoot peasants, unaccustomed as they may be, are learning to sip champagne.

RED AT WORK, Fortuny has confab with Foreign Minister Osegueda. The cabinet was meeting, but Osegueda came out when Fortuny sent for him.

TRADITION OF WARM SOUTHERN HOSPITALITY extended to business transactions, too. It was the custom in those days to close a business deal with a toast to each others' health and success. And the liquor usually poured was Southern Comfort.

This deliciously-different highball liquor has been synonymous with southern hospitality since the early days of the south. It originated in New Orleans. Visitors brought it up north. And now, it's enjoyed by people all over the world.

HOW THE SPIRIT OF THE OLD SOUTH BECAME THE FAVORITE OF NEW YORK

Cotton was king that pleasant October of 1830. There was a fine crop, and planters were down river for the market. New Orleans was crowded with anxious buyers. England wanted cotton, and so did the busy mills back East. That's why Jonathan Cain of New York had reason to be happy. He had just made a good buy of ten thousand bales of prime grade. Now, as papers were being signed, he eagerly awaited the traditional toast which always followed contract closing. It was custom to seal the deal with the pouring of a specially fine liquor found only in these parts. With a flourish, his host offered the golden toast: "To your health, suh, with Southern Comfort, the smoothest liquor in the land!" He sipped it slowly to enjoy every drop of its deliciously-different taste. He could identify it as neither whiskey, brandy nor liqueur... yet it combined the marvelous taste qualities of each! No wonder a dozen cases accompanied Jonathan on his return to New York. And, as he served it to his many friends, the fame of Southern Comfort grew. Today, this deliciously-different, 100-proof (same as a bonded whiskey) highball liquor is enjoyed by people all over America and Canada.

ITS SECRET FORMULA COMBINES TASTE QUALITIES of several liquors and that's what makes Southern Comfort so deliciously-different from other highball liquors. The first sip recalls the bouquet and boldness of fine brandy. Then, as it goes down, you enjoy the mellow smoothness and taste of a rare liqueur. And throughout all this, you have an awareness of its body, rich and deep, so like that of a great whiskey. And important too, it's 100-proof (same as a bonded whiskey).

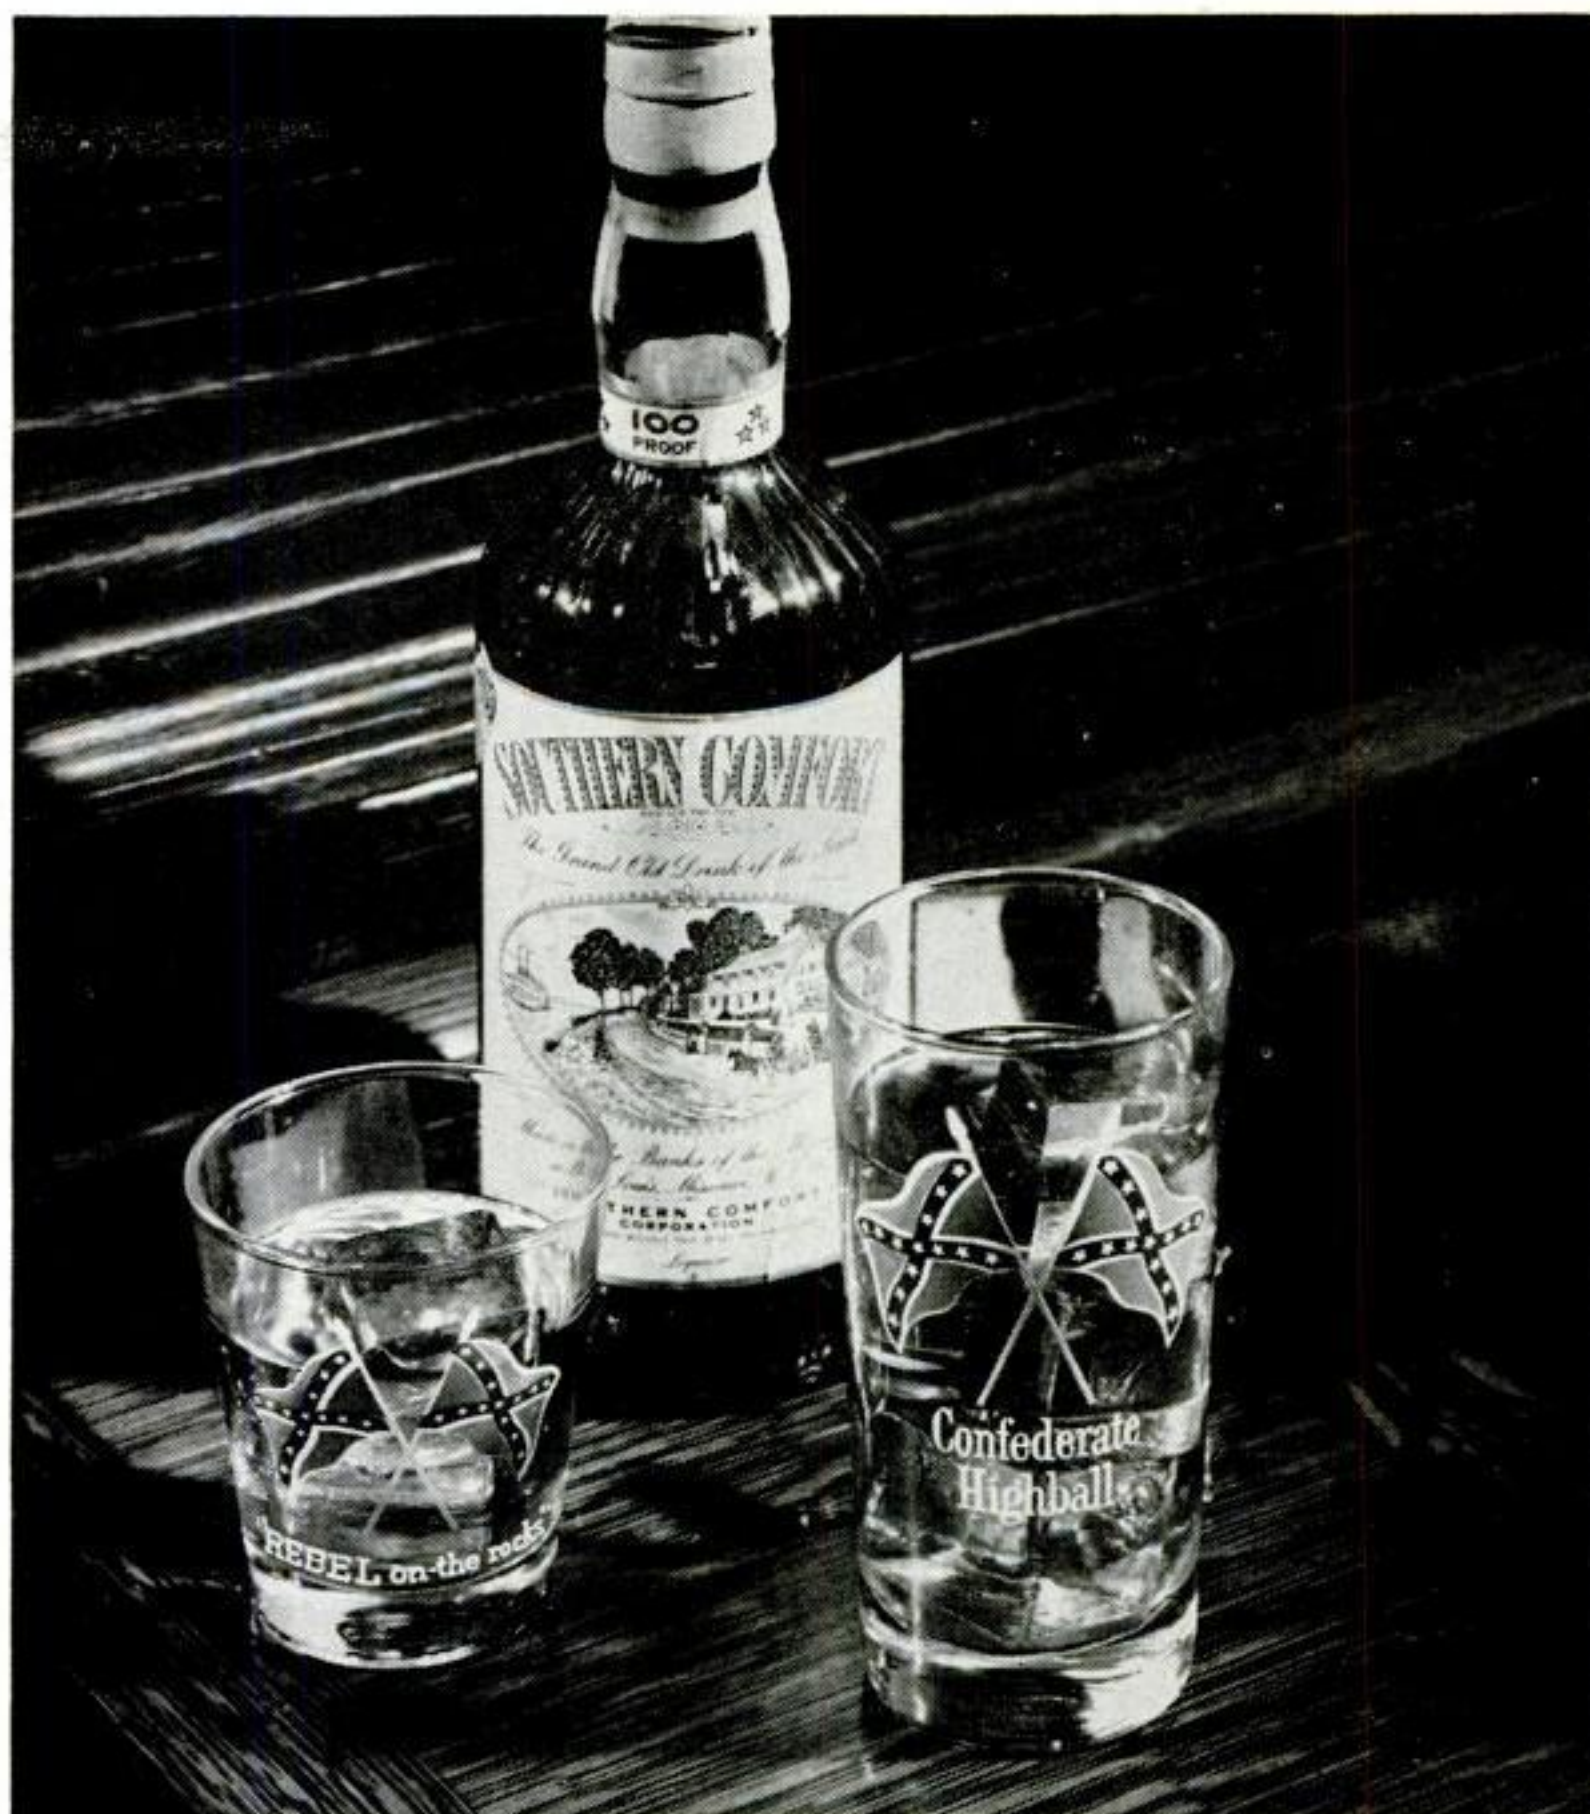

NEW YORK COTTONED TO SOUTHERN COMFORT and this famous drink soon became a favorite of Manhattan. It earned real popularity as a straight drink because of its smoothness and rare, delicious taste. And so today, more Southern Comfort is sold in New York than in any other city in the world.

ITS SECRET FORMULA WAS ALMOST LOST

Strangely, its secret formula was almost lost during Prohibition. But Francis E. Fowler, Jr., its present champion, happened across a bottle of Southern Comfort in an old wine cellar. After exhaustive search, he located and acquired the original formula—a secret close-held by a member of an old southern family. Demand for Southern Comfort rose as person after person suggested it to friends. Since then, over 500 million drinks have been served. Recent sales have been phenomenal. If you haven't tasted it, you're missing something!

TEN MILLION WATCHERS FOLLOW LUTHERAN FAMILY'S TV TRIALS

When the Missouri Synod of the Lutheran Church decided to get into TV two years ago, it went out and hired a topflight advertising agency and TV consulting firm, and a pair of high-priced script-writers. The result, a combination morality play and serial called This Is the Life, after more than a year on the screen, has been carried by more stations (134) than any other TV show. Its producers claim that it is seen by 10 million people, about half a million more than watch Bishop Fulton J. Sheen. This Is the Life involves audiences both with the everyday life of the Fishers, an average small-town family, and with a carefully chosen moral problem. In the episode shown here, Freddie Fisher, 9, demonstrates the value of home religious teaching to a skeptical aunt by giving up a cherished but ill-gotten toy. Partly because it is TV, partly because the Fishers live the good life, Freddie winds up with the toy anyway.

SHOW IS FILMED under supervision of Reverend H. W. Gockel, who sees dialog is read exactly as written and that story jibes with Christian teaching.

IPANA® WITH WD-9 DESTROYS ENZYMES

that cause decay and bad breath!

What are ENZYMES? Why should you fight them? Here are the facts—in plain language!

The enzymes you have been hearing about so much are formed by bacteria found in everyone's mouth.

When bacteria act on the food you eat, their enzymes speed up production of mouth acids. This causes tooth decay. Enzymes also help produce unpleasant mouth odor.

Dental scientists now say that most tooth decay as well as bad breath may be stopped by checking bacterial enzymes.

That is the important fact in the anti-enzyme reports.

And that is why you should use new white Ipana. All Ipana now on sale contains enzyme-destroying WD-9.

Brushing teeth regularly after eating with new Ipana containing WD-9 removes acid-producing bacterial enzymes that cause tooth decay and bad breath. (Most dentists recommend this way of brushing).

New Ipana with WD-9 is so effective that each brushing not only helps stop tooth decay—it stops most unpleasant mouth odor for as long as 9 hours. Even after eating and smoking.

Don't forget your gums—they are important, too. You'll be glad to know that brushing teeth with new Ipana containing WD-9—from gum margins toward biting edges—helps remove irritants that can lead to gum troubles.

ALL IPANA NOW ON SALE

THE gleaming streaks of light in this photograph are the head and tail lights of cars—Chevrolets, Pontiacs, Oldsmobiles, Buicks, Cadillacs and their leading competitors in each price class.

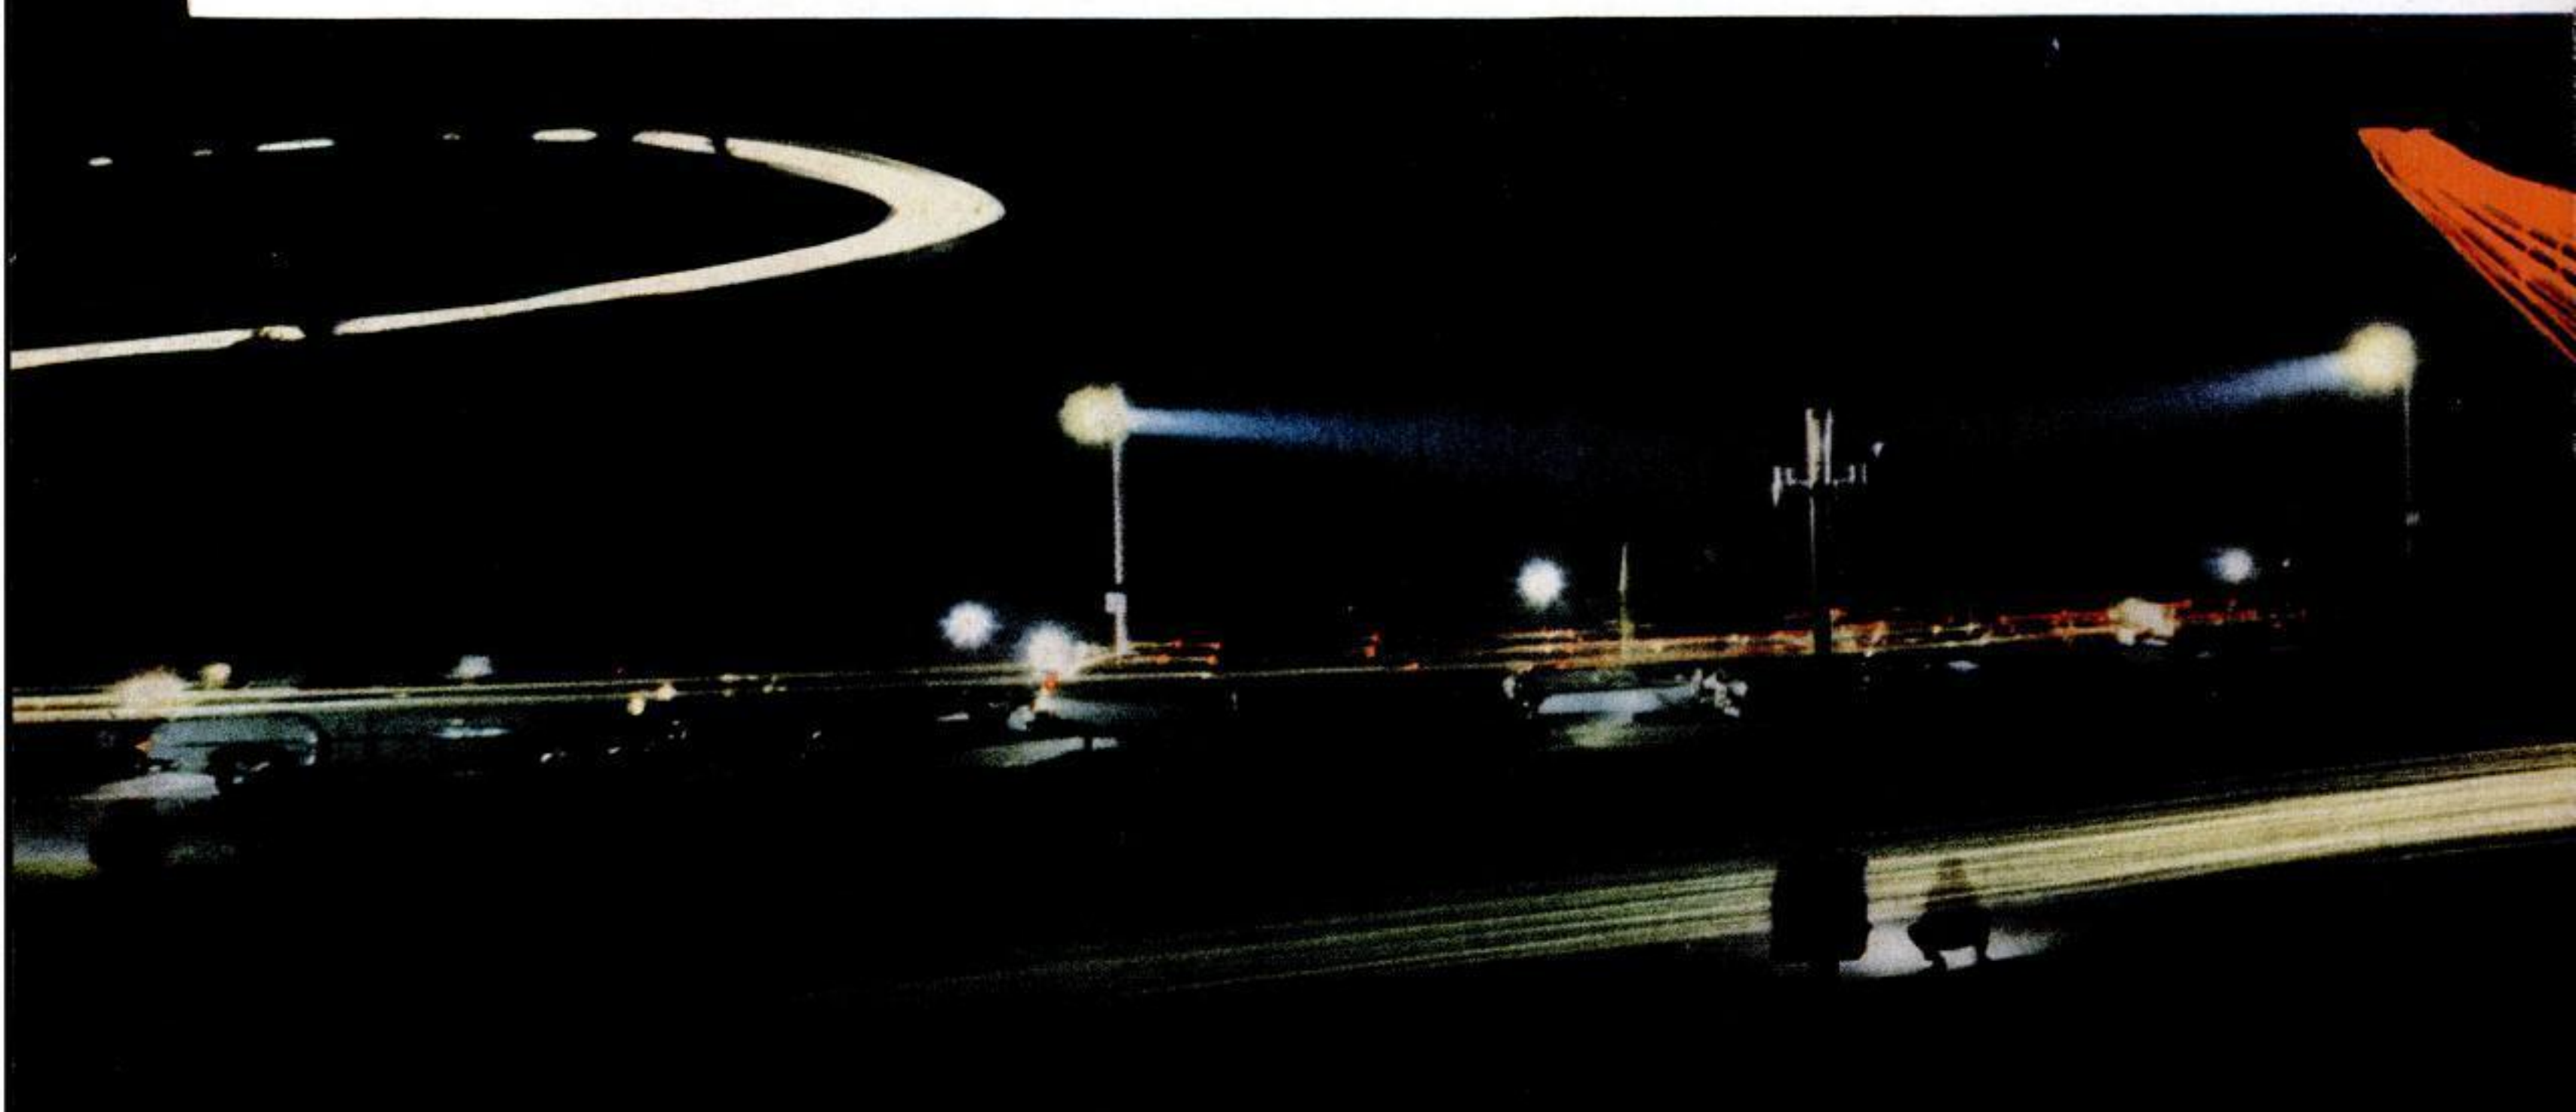

They are being pushed round the clock in a 25,000-mile night-and-day endurance test, so that our General Motors engineers can see just how well other makes stack up with ours.

For, in a competitive business like the motorcar industry, you have to know all the facts.

And one of the best ways to find them is to give cars an intensified version of the wear and tear they'd get in normal usage — then dismantle them and subject each part to precise laboratory analysis to see how well it has withstood the test.

Of course, this competitive endurance run is only one of the many tests we are constantly running off on our huge Michigan Proving Ground.

With all kinds of facilities, from 60 percent grades to Belgian block roads, we can test cars and trucks for springing, handling ease, hill climbing ability—anything we want to

DRILLING FOR STEAM

New Zealanders harness geysers to produce cheap, endless power

As long as men have known it, New Zealand's Wairakei Valley has been a strange place of tortured earth, pocked with bubbling mudholes, boiling springs and belching geysers. Beneath its restless floor are vast pockets of live steam, heated to explosive pressure by volcanic activity deep under the earth. Once no more than a natural curiosity, this thermal wonderland now promises rich contributions to New Zealand's power-hungry economy. Since last spring drilling crews and engineers backed by a $14 million appropriation have been probing the valley, tapping its subterranean boilers and trapping their pent-up power.

The 27 bores so far sunk into Wairakei's steam beds are thought to be capable of delivering some 70,000 kilowatts of power, when their steam is used to drive generators—enough to supply a town of 150,000. Eventually, the valley's total output may be many times that great. But the earthbound steam will serve another and equally important purpose: it will be used to produce heavy water, precious source of the H-bomb component deuterium. Normally, the production of deuterium through distillation is expensive because of the high cost of heating water to steam. But here at Wairakei, where the steam can be had for the harnessing, the violent vapors from the earth's interior can be made to yield, at the turn of a valve, cheap chemicals for war's destruction or cheap power for peaceful progress.

A DANGEROUS EUROPEAN

MIDDLEMAN IN A FAMILY QUARREL, A CANADIAN OBSERVER FINDS ROOTS OF MISUNDERSTANDING

PROBABLY the most important and certainly the most terrifying fact in the free world today is not Russia's strength, Europe's weakness or anything that can be measured in statistics.

It is the dry rot, something intangible developing within the minds of nameless millions, that is steadily undermining the friendship of the old world and the new, on which the fate of both must hang.

Among Europeans this phenomenon is called anti-Americanism, among Americans, gross ingratitude. It is much more complicated than simple prejudice. It is, in fact, a kind of psychic disease which, unless cured, could some day prove mortal, thereby confirming the prognosis of that distinguished political physician, the late Joseph Stalin.

In Europe and especially in Britain the quiet but bitter resentment against American policies and, worse, against American people is so deep and has grown so fast of late that statesmen hardly dare to discuss it in public and try to mask it with speeches and postures. This well-meaning conspiracy of concealment clearly is failing. Among the people, who in the end will decide everything, the U.S.'s moral leadership of the free world, the only kind of leadership that can possibly succeed, is in danger of collapse.

In 7,000 miles of travel by automobile through the eight major nations of Western Europe, I heard over and over the same dismal recital: the Americans are ill-mannered and blundering children, their civilization is a combination of wealth, corruption, Coca-Cola and Senator McCarthy, their government is probably leading the world to war. I met only one man, an English politician too eminent to be identified, who had a word of gratitude for the U.S.

"The Americans," said he, "saved us from Germany in two wars. I'm convinced they will save us from Russia by preventing a third. And meanwhile they have saved us from bankruptcy."

Europe, blind in its ingratitude, has yet to grasp that simple truth. And the Americans, in their misjudgment of all foreigners, have yet to grasp the first facts of Europe's life.

The relations between the British and American peoples are, of course, the crux of the problem as they must be the foundation of peace. Those relations are deteriorating because they are approached on the primary illusion that the two peoples are spiritually alike, compatible by nature and brothers under the skin. Actually their superficial resemblance is the chief cause of their incompatibility because it raises false expectations, ending in irritation and resentment.

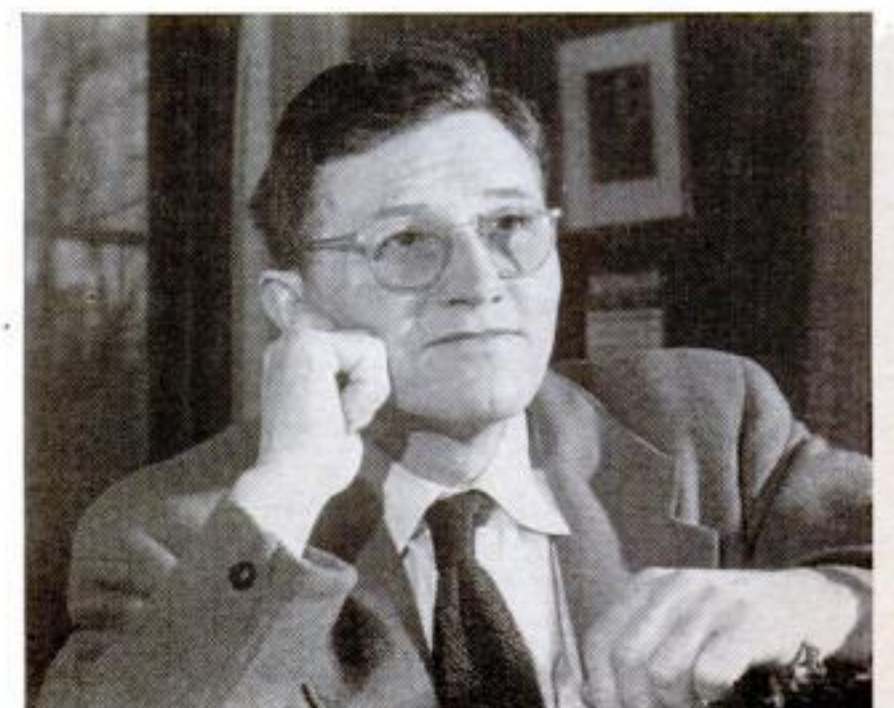

"Most of our troubles with the Americans," said a wise old don at Cambridge, "stem from the awful barrier of a common language. Since they speak the same language the British and Americans expect each other to be the same sort of people. When they turn out to be utterly different both are disappointed and angered, as if the other fellows had somehow let them down. An Englishman isn't disturbed when a Frenchman eats snails or keeps a mistress. That is the French way. But when the American chews gum, dresses oddly, uses a queer accent or starts a fight in a pub, we find it inexcusable because it isn't British. And the Americans feel the same way about us."

When the average American talks about Britain he is thinking of an imaginary land and people that never existed and never will. When the Briton thinks about the U.S. he usually pictures a revolting travesty provided by the criminal cunning of the American movie makers, by Senator McCarthy (who has done more harm to transatlantic friendship than anyone since George III) and by Britain's shoddy mass-circulation press, which ignores American life to lavish its space on the adulteries of Hollywood, the witch-hunts of Congress and the night life of New York.

In all this tragedy of errors the Canadian occupies a special position, privileged but often uncomfortable. Both sides will talk to him as they will never talk to each other. The Englishman usually supposes that the

by BRUCE HUTCHISON

IN THE SNOBBERY AND WEAKNESS OF EUROPEANS, OUR RIGID INSISTENCE ON 'THE AMERICAN WAY'

Canadian is either an exiled Englishman or a rather superior American not beyond saving. The American regards the Canadian as just another North American, artificially separated from God's country by a rather absurd line on a map. Neither the American nor the Englishman has begun to understand the paramount fact of Canadian life—that we Canadians too are a separate breed and growing more distinct, more Canadian, every day. It is thus amazing and embarrassing to a Canadian when the Englishman suddenly removes his armor, relaxes the stiff upper lip and confesses his horror of Americans, or the American takes down his hair and admits that the English simply baffle him.

These troubles have three current points of friction: the American's total inability to understand foreigners and his careless manners once he leaves his own country; Europe's painful adjustment to a secondary role in world power; and Europe's fear that American power will be misused, at best by stupidity, at worst by malice.

The behavior of a handful

AMERICAN manners, the least significant factor in this equation of discord, loom largest in the mind of the ordinary European. Quite wrongly he judges American civilization by its manners, or rather he judges a nation of 150 million people by the behavior of a handful. He cannot penetrate the brassy facade of fictional American life to see the hard-working, hospitable and great-hearted people of America.

The habits of American soldiery in Europe are as familiar as they are exaggerated. You can guess the dimensions of this problem when you find the sleepy old town of Heidelberg, the haunt of Goethe and the Student Prince, so jammed with American Army trucks and generals' limousines that at 6 p.m. the traffic halted dead for 15 minutes at a time. It took me a full hour to drive seven blocks. Here is a massive physical friction and beneath it a much deeper friction in the minds of the conquerors and the conquered.

In a wine garden beside Goethe's river a former captain of artillery told me that the British army was brave and always "correct" (his highest adjective of praise) and that the Americans, though fearless, knew nothing of discipline. Unbuttoning his collar, putting his feet up on the table and hoisting a bottle to his lips, he gave an admiring crowd an imitation of an American soldier in the presence of a general: "Hi, general, how's the boy?" In the German army, this former Nazi informed me, a soldier would not be shot for such an offense. He would be sent to a lunatic asylum as obviously insane.

This incident reflects an attitude that is quite general in Germany and one that is not necessarily in conflict with the results of the recent election there. By their electoral vote the German people demonstrated decisively that they know their future lies with the West. But even Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, with his newly augmented power, may prove a more prickly partner than is popularly supposed. Ultimately Adenauer probably will follow U.S. leadership—the Germans accept the political and military facts of the world—but most of them, like the artillery captain, will continue to treasure their misconceptions of the American character and their contempt for American habits.

"The Americans are children." I heard that phrase in eight countries and in more towns than I can remember. "But in time," added a genial Roman professor, "they will grow up and learn. They will know how to live, how to enjoy themselves instead of dying of a cardiac condition at 50. They'll learn that there's more in living than money."

This, mind you, from the citizen of a country which has not yet learned to live on its own resources, which could hardly survive without the money of those hard-working adolescents, the taxpayers of the U.S.

Yes, and as the professor and I chatted on a main street of Rome some hundreds of Italian youths, who presumably knew how to live, were conducting their nightly riot, the Fascists and Communists screaming, gesticulating and frothing like madmen, chin to chin. No one objected to their manners because they were Italians. An American soldier with a drink too many is taken to represent the historic barbarism of his race. In Naples a hotelkeeper clumsily parodied for me, in what he supposed to be a Yankee accent, an American calling for another bottle when any sensible European would be satisfied with a single glass of wine. Yet the only Americans in the room were drinking Coke in a corner with all the symptoms of homesickness.

He spent five months talking to his many acquaintances in public and private life in most countries this side of the Iron Curtain.

In Cambridge an English airman said he was happy because he had just escaped from an airdrome in East Anglia where English and Americans were stationed together. The Americans, he explained, were poor types when drunk. But, I asked, what were they like when sober. In his crisp English style he said he did not know because he had never seen them off duty in that condition.

Now, this was a palpable lie, a lie so often repeated as to become a joke, a myth, an outrage.

The wife of an English officer in Berlin said, and undoubtedly believed, that the American Occupation Forces had bought up for a song from hungry Germans all the best art treasures and household furniture in the city.

A chauffeur in Bonn, a German major captured in North Africa and imprisoned in Kansas, told me that the Americans were good people who had treated him "correctly." But he intends to emigrate to Canada because lately he had been hearing terrible things about the U.S. He is not likely to hear anything else in Europe.

When the Folies Bergère, between its parades of naked women, pictures the typical American traveler as an oaf in a dinner jacket, Paris laughs but the laughter does not hide the bitterness of a sick country.

When a sleek American millionairess, forced to leave her limousine and travel by train through the St. Gotthard tunnel, complains about the service, her air of disdain disgusts a whole trainload of Europeans so that they forget the pleasant young American couple in the next seat, quietly minding their own business.

The Roman guide, for all his well-trained polish, cannot disguise his contempt for the old maid from Spokane who tries to absorb Italian culture in three easy lessons.

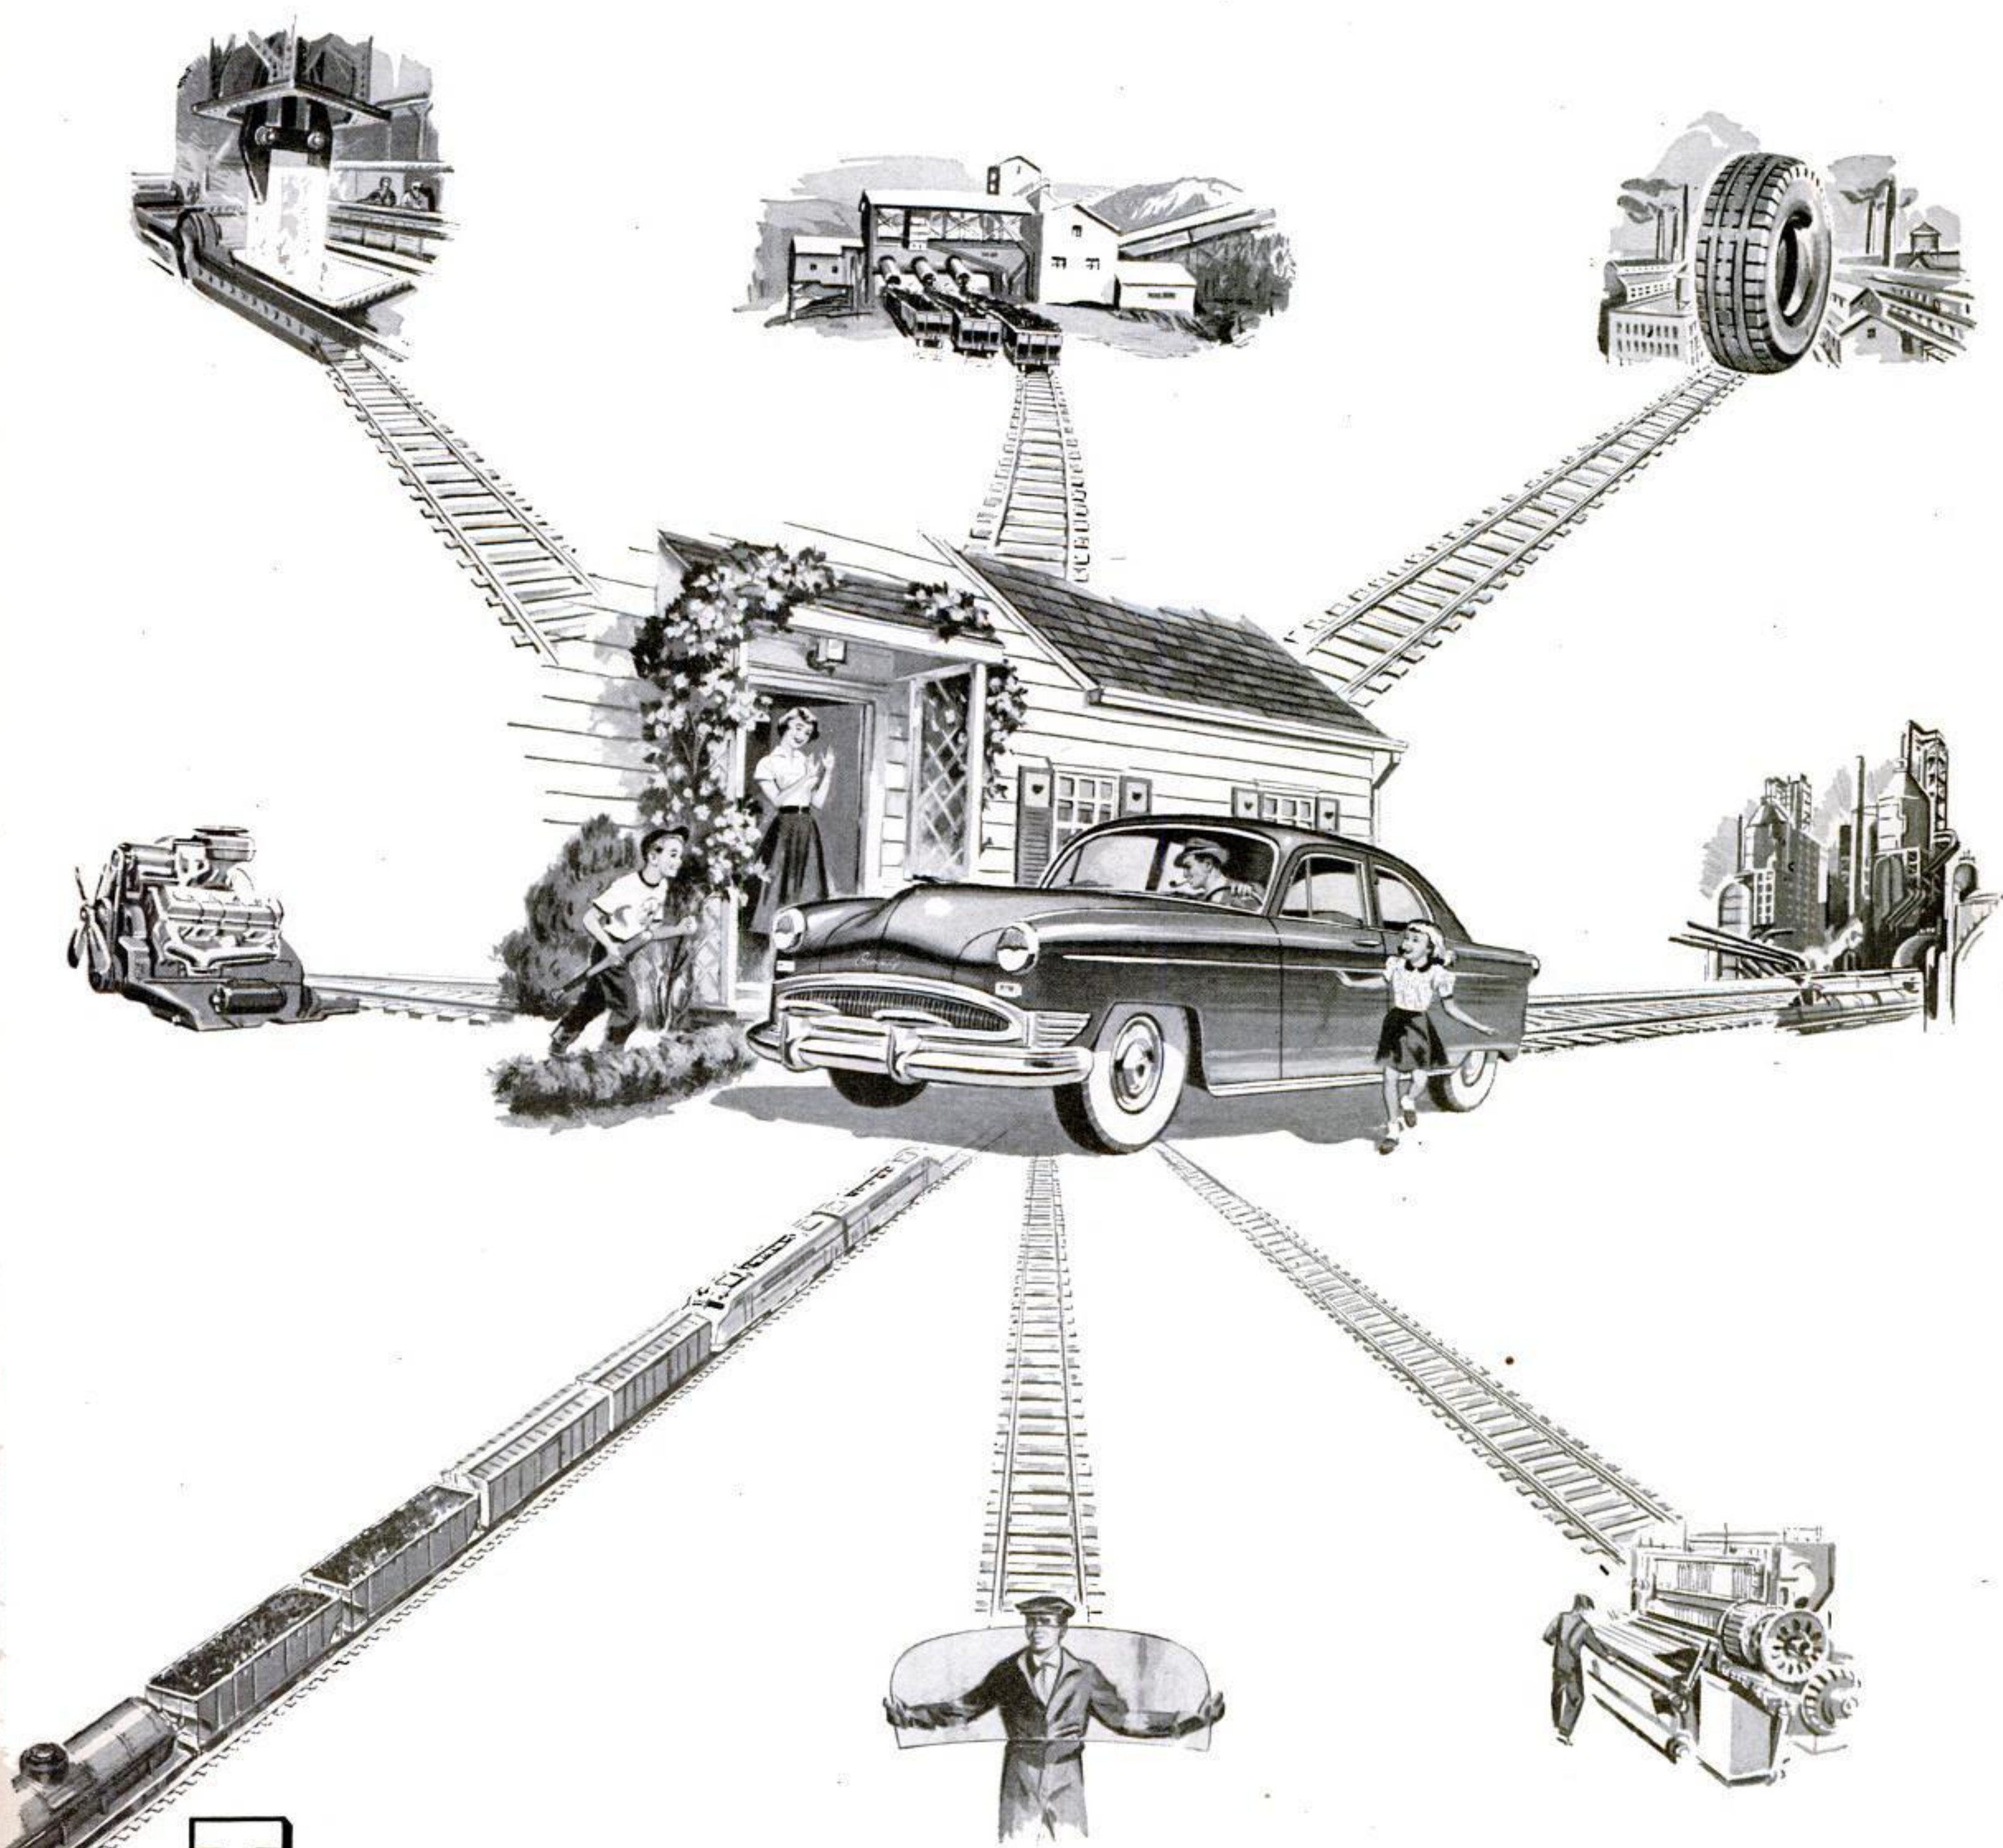

An Italian innkeeper assures you that all Americans are crazy and lawless, while he himself is laboriously engaged at the moment in cooking two sets of books to cheat his government out of income tax.

Bad manners, though no one in Europe seems to suspect it, are not confined to the Americans. British manners, for example, are perfect by British standards. They are often repulsive by American standards. No one can resist the bluff friendliness of the British workingman, but the American is repelled by the coldness of the upper classes, a coldness deepening as the social scale ascends. The American is amazed to find that Britain, perhaps the most successful democracy in the art of government, is not and may never be a social democracy. An economic revolution has changed the distribution of wealth. It has hardly made a dent in the unquestioned principle of class.

The English gentry's exquisite deportment, the casual look learned by long study, the clothes carefully tailored to appear careless, the accent acquired by years of sedulous apprenticeship, the English gentleman's unalterable and sincere conviction of his racial

The assembly line that's 225,000 miles long... ends at your front door!

Remember how proud you were when you drove that bright, shiny, new car up to your front door for the first time? And the family came flocking, and maybe a wistful neighbor or two?

Well, the railroads had a part in that pride, too. For over their 225,000-mile assembly line of steel rails they moved the raw materials required for making the 15,000 parts that go into an auto. Then they moved finished parts—frames, engines, tires, fabrics, glass — from factories all over America to the auto assembly plants.

And just as railroads helped build your family car, they help make possible almost everything else you use in your daily life and work...the food you eat, the clothes you wear, the house in which you live.

In doing this, railroads move more tons of freight more miles than all other forms of transportation combined. And, important to you when it comes to the prices you pay for things, railroads do this huge job of hauling at charges which average less than those of any other form of general transportation.

superiority—all this at first chills and then heats a normal American. The Englishman for his part is appalled by the American's habit of saying what he feels and exposing his soul indecently.

The American cannot be expected to understand immediately that the Englishman, frightened by his own sentimentality, ashamed of his secret emotionalism and pitifully shy, has constructed an outer glaze as a protective coloration against a prying world. The American may not appreciate at once the solid, unshakable strength of the nation behind the formal facade: the self-discipline of a single organism, an indivisible community, a single family, beside which the society of North America is almost an anarchy; he does not readily see the nameless nobility and grubby heroism of the mass of people whose organic unity overrides all class divisions and is the true secret of Britain's greatness.

Accustomed to speed in work and play, the American is infuriated by the leisurely pace of Britain, the delays and endless paper work, the all-pervading officialdom and fussing over silly details, the uniform and badges of office worn by so many people from the hall porter to the beefeater of the Tower, the unquestioning assurance that the rulers may err but that the system itself is the ultimate work of man.

"You must first understand two essential facts," said one of England's most powerful industrialists. "We are an island people, we are isolated by the sea and we have no real interest in any other country. And we are a lazy people, we only do as much as we have to for survival, we prefer to enjoy life and we never strain ourselves until we're on the brink of disaster. We are, you might say, a Dunkirk people."

From his office we could see a road gang taking a break to drink the tea they had brewed on a brazier full of hot coals. In a bombed-out concrete basement near St. Paul's, a band of office workers played lunch-hour soccer with a tennis ball.

"You see the whole problem there," said the industrialist. "We have to convince those easygoing people that London isn't yet rebuilt and we are facing an economic Dunkirk."

Meanness, envy, jealousy

THE power of self-criticism is stronger in Britain than foreigners suppose. For example, the day after the coronation the Times (with shocking bad manners on such an occasion, many of its readers thought) suddenly lashed out at the British people as "a good people grown careless." It is said they were "content to live hand-to-mouth" and that "meanness of spirit, envy and jealousy sour too much of our national life."

HATING AMERICA CONTINUED

Probably it would be fairer to say that the British people are tired by war and austerity, a double ordeal which the American has never really known. British pride is hurt by the decline of Britain's relative strength in the world balance of power. As a result the British sometimes reveal a brittleness unnatural to them, as when Foreign Secretary Eden was publicly criticized for his perfectly reasonable decision to take medical treatment in the U.S. If British manners irritate the American the German's current air of servility and heartiness before his conquerors is still harder to take. The French, who claim the best manners on earth and secretly regard all other races as barbarous, have only to step into an automobile to make the countryside hideous with the ceaseless screech of their horns, the roads a deathtrap with their recklessness.

No standard for Americans

It is all a matter of standards, but few Europeans admit that Americans have any right to a standard of their own. Vainly the Canadian tries to explain that Americans at home are well behaved, friendly and considerate. I never found one European who believed me. I had half-convinced a hotel clerk in Barcelona when an American guest loaded with wine and money lurched up to announce in a strident voice that the barkeeper had insulted him by refusing him more drink, and he must have a public apology or leave. The Spaniard will continue to believe all Americans are like that.

The clash of manners however distressing does not begin to explain the growing anti-Americanism in Europe. It is, to a large extent anyway, only a rationalization of Europe's frustration and envy, an escape mechanism to cover Europe's own sense of weakness and dependence.

This is particularly true and doubtless inevitable in Britain. The British people are going through not only a hard time economically but a cruel readjustment spiritually. After centuries of supremacy it is not easy for a great people to accept the supreme power of the U.S., to realize that poverty is their reward for saving the world singlehanded in the first years of the war while even the conquered Germans are living better on the whole than the conquerors. Nor is it easy to accept moral sermons from Mr. Dulles, who runs Malenkov and McCarthy a close third in the present European unpopularity contest.

The postwar generosity of the U.S. secretly rankles in all British hearts however it may be acclaimed in public. The money certainly is appreciated. The necessity of accepting it is bound to hurt.

ANTICAPITALISM in Europe brings charges that U.S. wants war for profits. Here, in English cartoon, man tries to dissuade financier from suicide on grounds that Korean truce might fail.

A wise Londoner explained Britain's feelings by recalling a story about Field Marshal Smuts. The South African statesman was asked why he was being so ferociously attacked by a certain politician. Said Smuts, "I can't imagine. I never did that man a good turn in my life." The U.S.'s costly good turns of recent years have made few friends in Europe.

These emotional frictions are not half so deep or permanently important as the ignorance that feeds them. To the Europeans America is as distant, unmapped and uncongenial as the moon. The Americans know much more about the outer surface of Europe. Yet they miss the whole point. "They think," as a world-weary Frenchman told me, "that they know foreigners and how to deal with them. Actually we are no better understood than the inhabitants of Mars."

The Europeans are misunderstood largely because the average American regards the American way of life as the true norm and ideal state of man. He expects foreigners to grow inevitably toward this particular society with a little more experience, enlightenment and help.

No 'American way' for Europe

THE Europeans of course have no intention of doing anything of the sort. They will imitate American techniques, accept American gifts and try to duplicate America's riches. They will never forego their own ways of life, which they consider superior to any other. Before the U.S. can even begin to solve the transatlantic problem it will have to accept the curious fact that for most of the world the American way of life will always be a curious aberration.

This really should not matter, but as one of the most penetrating minds of Britain remarked, it wounds the Americans. "We Englishmen," he explained, "never expected to be loved when we were running the show. We didn't particularly want to be. We always knew that unpopularity was the price of power. But the Americans, poor fellows, just can't bear not to be loved. It burns them right up. We won't get on together until the Americans realize that power is a lonely business, with more kicks than h'pence. Yes, and it would help a lot if Mr. Dulles stopped talking like the Deity."

An Electric Shaver Give Me Close Shaves?"

Recent events have added a final friction of another kind, stemming from a fear that the U.S. Government does not know how to use its power. Eisenhower has been, so far, a sharp disappointment to his European friends. They expected the President to exploit his election victory as he exploited the beachheads of Africa and Normandy. Instead they saw in Washington a vacuum in which the President seemed poised uncertainly at dead centre.

Such fears are not confined to Europeans. After a close look at Europe Walter Lippmann returned home to report "that American influence is declining precipitously as the Eisenhower Administration displays its weakness and its indecision." Mr. Lippmann erred on the side of understatement.

Are we trigger-happy?

THREE distinct factors can be identified in the confused debate now raging on this subject throughout the continent. There is, to begin with, the familiar notion that the trigger-happy Americans will blunder into a world war. When you tell the Europeans that it just is not in the nature of the Americans to start a war, that they have never fought until they had to, the Europeans point to General MacArthur, the "China Lobby," the wild men of the Congress, the bullying threats of Senator McCarthy and above all to the dominant position of so many military men in the American government.

To most Canadians the theory of an aggressive American imperialism is not alarming. To countless Europeans it is a deadly nightmare. The U.S., as one of Britain's most influential figures observed, might survive an atomic war though broken and desolated. For Britain and Europe there is no such hope. Glancing out his penthouse window across the vast bulk of London, a shining target for bombers, this man added, "Another war would leave nothing here but an atomic swamp. Do you wonder we get the wind up a bit when we hear the lunatics howling in Washington?"

Another nightmare is still more urgent and seems more likely to materialize. That is the fear of an American depression. Here again Europe feels itself far more exposed than the U.S. One of England's leading economists put a problem of infinite complexity in simple terms: "The U.S. is rich enough to stand without serious strain a recession of say 5 or even 10% in its national income. For us it would be sheer disaster. Remember that in the spring of 1949 American business dropped about 5% for a few months, a tiny affair in the States. But the drop in American imports just about wrecked us dollarwise. Within three months we had to devalue the pound. We can't stand another shake like that."

Will our economy hold up?

TO the Europeans an American recession, even a small one, is no longer an economic process. It has become a moral crime. Few seem to remember that the American economy, for all its mistakes, has recently saved the world from ruin. The Russians remember, with regret.

Unjust and ungrateful criticism of the American system is constantly fed by American congressmen. Europe has been shaken to find Eisenhower, who preached low tariffs and increasing trade in his election campaign, yielding to congressional pressure and postponing this whole issue for a year. He postponed it, moreover, at the very moment when the Commonwealth was ready to risk the gigantic gamble of convertibility (the freeing of the pound to find its own level in terms of the dollar) if there were a reasonable hope of American cooperation. When Eden and Butler proposed the Commonwealth plan of reduced tariffs, expanded trade and convertible currencies to Washington, they were politely brushed off by the American government which had formerly been demanding just such a policy.

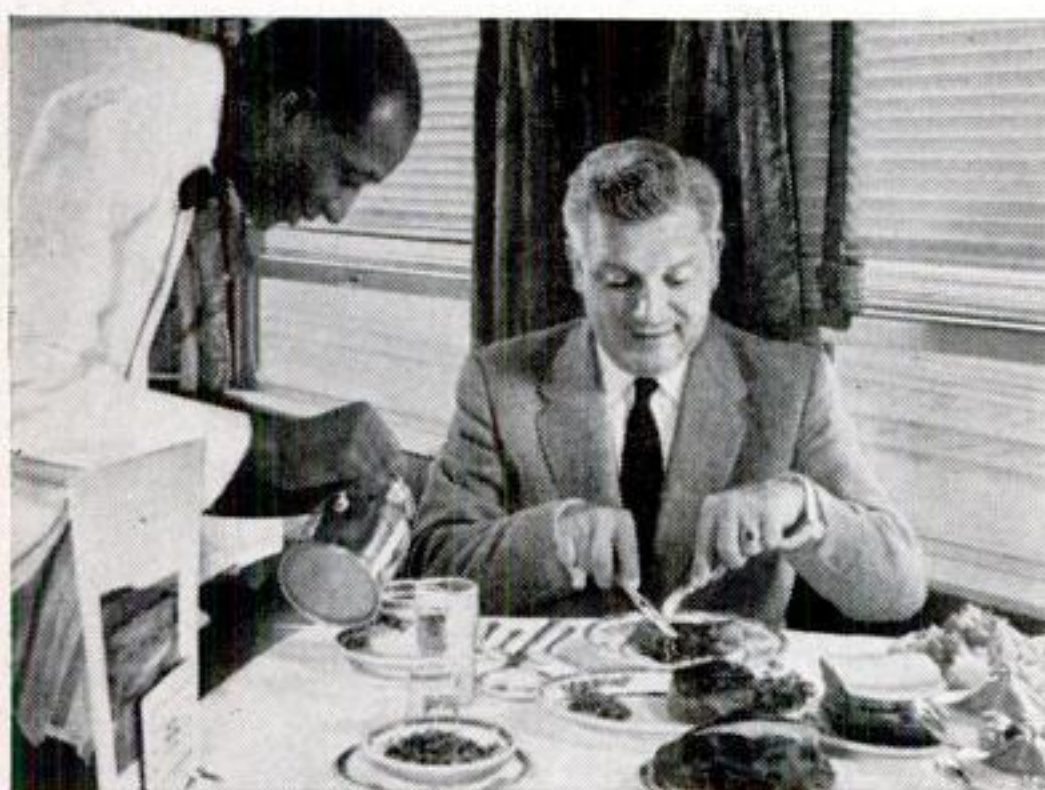

Doubtless it is far too early to foresee the result of Eisenhower's postponed but inevitable collision with the protectionists of his party. While the chauvinistic Beaverbrook press shrilly announces that American tariffs are going up as they did in the '20s, the real thinkers of Britain fear that Eisenhower will face his problem too late, when even a minor American recession makes tariff reductions politically impossible.

The third factor in Europe's disillusionment is doing still more harm at the moment: Senator McCarthy's crusade of vilification has convinced millions of Europeans that the American people have scrapped the Bill of Rights and repudiated the doctrine of personal liberty on which their whole society is founded. For the free world outside the U.S., McCarthyism is not just a spectacle. It is a tragedy.

The transatlantic misunderstanding becomes ludicrous when you hear an intelligent Frenchman lamenting the blunders of the U.S., while his own government cannot even manage its own finances or be sure of surviving until next weekend; when an Italian deplores American belligerence, though he himself only a few years ago was a member of Mussolini's brain trust; or when a former officer of Hitler's staff solemnly affirms that the Americans cannot be trusted with the atom bomb.

The cause of the problem is clear to anyone who knows the U.S. and has observed at firsthand the tortured mind of Europe. The cure is much harder to find. Certainly it will not be found in the present attempt to hush up the unpleasant truth by diplomatic postures, after-dinner oratory and transatlantic cargoes of soft soap.

Cooperation can yield understanding

A CANADIAN, as a middleman in this wrangle between his friends, must conclude, first, that any workable long-term agreement between the British and American peoples must be based not on myths but on necessity. Out of day-to-day cooperation in practical affairs understanding will come in time. To expect it by some law of nature or some racial affinity is not only absurd but dangerous, because it is bound to fail.

Second, the U.S. and Europe will never learn to get along together until they realize that they simply do not know each other, until they see that the U.S. is presented as a wicked caricature in Europe and Europe as a preposterous fairy tale in the U.S.

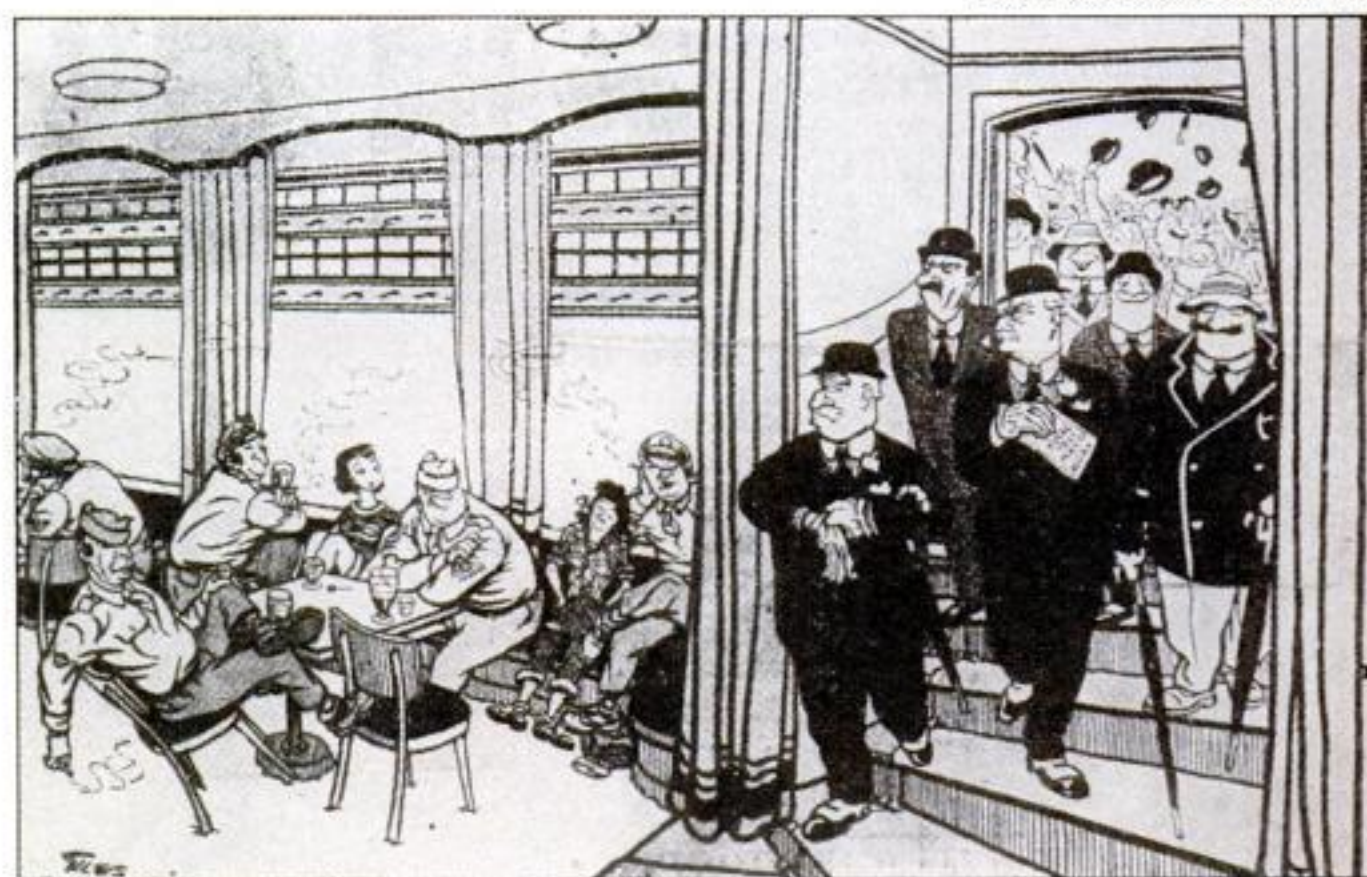

Third, the U.S. must understand that the caricature of its life is largely of its own making through the mischievous agency of Hollywood, McCarthyism, the lunatic fringe of the Congress and the manners of Americans abroad.

Fourth, the U.S. must be convinced that Europe is not a broken-down, antique model of the American system which must be replaced by a new model off the Detroit assembly line, but a contingent of vigorous, able people, tragically divided but in many ways more civilized than the new world; that these people are not objects of charity but allies and friends absolutely essential to the survival of the U.S.

Finally, Europe must reconcile itself, as it has not reconciled itself yet, to the historic fact that the U.S. is and will remain for a long time the largest power on earth; that this power can be influenced to good ends but never compelled or repealed; that no great nation in the U.S.'s position has ever been so generous to foreigners, so innocent of ambition, so eager to do the right thing, so assailed by conscience or so suddenly summoned by history to perform a miracle.

In our time many miracles will be required. None of them can hope to succeed without a miraculous change in the transatlantic climate.

REAL GONE GAL QUITS THE MET

JIMMY STARTED IT ALL by getting Miss Traubel to join in recording a duet, A Real Piano Player.

Traubel rebuffs the opera with a blast at 'snobbery'

Helen Traubel, one of the world's best Wagnerian sopranos, is also a high-spirited woman with a lively sense of humor which keeps her from taking some of the stuffer aspects of opera too seriously. Recently, on the advice of Jimmy Durante with whom she has teamed up on records (above) and TV, she took a nightclub job in Chicago's Chez Paree. Mixing arias and torch songs, she got as warm an ovation as she had ever won in the world's opera houses.

At this point, Rudolf Bing, boss of New York's Metropolitan Opera, announced Miss Traubel would have to avoid linking her name with nightclubs. Miss Traubel told Bing to keep his contract, left the Met, and said: U.S. artists must realize "American folk music is as much their province as Wagner. . . . To assert art can be found at the Metropolitan . . . but not in a nightclub is rank snobbery. . . . I love the songs of Gershwin, Handy, Kern, Rodgers, Berlin. . . . Since I cannot sing them at the Met, I am singing them at nightclubs. . . ."

ORNERY OIL DRUM STRAIGHTENS OUT RIDERS

Visitors at the Mayan Dude Ranch just outside Bandera, Texas are taking some of the most spectacular spills in bronco-busting history from a contraption made out of an empty oil drum, four supporting posts and some rope. Put up by Ranch Owner E. A. Hicks, the iron bronco can be used as a trainer for beginners. But with four husky ranch hands tugging on the ropes (right) it turns into a treacherous sidwinder which can toss even expert riders.

Because Texans don't like to think there is anything they cannot ride, the bucking barrel has become the ranch's most popular steed. More than 100 people a day flock to the synthetic rodeo to try to tame it, but so far every brash bronco-buster, including the LIFE photographer who took these pictures (next page), has wound up in the sawdust pit. Happy Owner Hicks is not worried about his standing 200-to-1 offer to anyone who can master the beast, but he has another problem: the stubborn riders are wearing out a saddle almost every week.

PIECING OUT A NECK

Possibly the first giraffe ever to find itself with too little neck is this one. Her name is June, and she is using her tongue to piece out the shortage in order to snare a marshmallow. In so doing, June is demonstrating that giraffes can get sophisticated without getting good sense. Back in Africa where she was born four years ago, June would have remained content with plain fare, leaves picked off the tops of trees. But ever since she came to live at Chicago's Brookfield zoo more than two years ago, June has been developing a taste for fancy viands like tossed salads, porridge sweetened with brown sugar, and marshmallows tossed near her pen by generous visitors. Sometimes this exotic gluttony makes her sick. However, her keeper has learned that he can cure her bellyaches by dosing her with leaves from trees.

What made Milwaukee change to Blatz Beer?

Today it's Blatz!

No chip off the old block, this modern Blatz beer. For Blatz is brewed to today's tastes, today's times. So wonderfully different from the old-fashioned, harsh-tasting beers of the past! That's why Milwaukee has changed to Blatz. Your first glass will explain in full why the modern Blatz flavor makes it the best seller in the beer capital, year after year... with a preference very nearly as great as the next two brands combined. So get in step with modern times, better times... and there's no better time for Blatz than now!

The Pause that Refreshes

Shoppers have to meet a budget but they want quality, too.

When it comes to refreshment,
more people ask for Coke
than any other soft drink in the world.

That's easy to understand . . .

besides its matchless flavor,
Coca-Cola has quality you can trust.

Pause for a Coke as you shop . . . it's delicious.
